NEW CARDINALS RECEIVE RED HATS' AT PUBLIC CONSISTORY

Solemn But Brilliant Ceremony Marks Final Steps in Creation of the Princes of Roman Church.

Rome, Nov. 30.—The concluding and most impressive ceremony connected with the creation of the new cardinals occurred this morning at the great public consistory at the vatican when fourteen princes of the church, including the three American prelates, Cardinals Falconio, Farley and O'Connell, were invested with the red hat indicating their rank.

From early morning an immense stir was visible all over the city, the places of residence of the new cardinals being centers of attraction. Much attention was focused on the movements of the American cardinals and large crowds gathered around the doors of the Hotel Bristol to see Cardinal Farley enter his carriage; about the Hotel Quirinal, where Cardinal O'Connell is stopping, and about the monastery of San Antonio, where Cardinal Falconio rests with his brother Francisca monks.

Throngs Watch Procession.

Thousands of people also gathered on balconies and roofs and along the streets to witness the passing of the cardinals, the great clerical nobles, the ambassadors and the guests invited to attend the ceremony in the vatican.

Inside the vatican unusual excitement was evident as for four years no consistory had been held and for centuries not so many creations had occurred at one time. Every available space in all the rooms and corridors along which the papal procession was to pass and in the hall of beatification where the consistory was to be held was occupied at an early hour.

Scene of the Ceremony.

The hall of beatification, an immense chamber over the portico of St. Peter's, had been specially prepared for the occasion. At one end stood the throne, flanked by the cardinals' stalls and the places for high ecclesiastics and the Sistine choir, while facing these were special tribunes for the diplomatic body, accredited to the holy see and for the laity.

Below the tribunes, beneath the latter, had been arranged standing room for ticket holders, among whom were nearly 1,000 Americans. After all had taken their allotted places distant strains of vocal music were heard and the low approaching murmur of many voices announced the arrival of the papal procession.

The picture which then unfolded itself was magnificent.

First came a jeweled cross, held aloft by a white clad figure. Following came a group of Swiss guards in their uniform of red, black and yellow designed by Michael Angelo the men carrying halberds. Then came the Sistine choir, led by Abbo Porosi, singing as they marched, and after them ecclesiastics of all orders, priests in black, monks in brown and white, heads of religious congregations and members of the papal court dressed in quaint Elizabethan costumes.

Behind were the cardinals of Curia, about twenty in number, all dignified and solemn. Then followed a detachment of nobles.

Pius Blessed the Multitude.

Directly afterward came the venerable figure of Pius X in full pontifical robes, blessing the kneeling multitude as he passed.

The procession closed with another detachment of guards.

When all were seated intense silence fell upon the assembly broken by the rising to their feet of the cardinals of Curia, who advanced to do homage to the pope and then to introduce into the papal presence the new princes of the church. The venerable group was now entered drew the gaze of all present. The American prelates, John M. Farley, archbishop of New York; William O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, and Diomedeo Falconio, formerly apostolic delegate at Washington, were eagerly pointed out.

They with the other cardinals just created, approached the papal throne, and one by one knelt before Pius X, kissing his hand and foot and receiving the papal embrace. They were then led to the places set apart for them to the accompaniment of music by the Sistine choir.

Receive Their Red Hats.

The new cardinals then again advanced separately to the foot of the throne to receive their red hats, which were held over the head of each recipient by the master of ceremonies while the pontiff repeated the usual Latin formula for such occasions, after which he embraced the suppliant kneeling before him. When the long ceremony was closed the pope rose, bestowed the papal benediction on all present and withdrew with all the cardinals and the others who had formed the procession, the choir singing as they went while bells and corridors echoed with acclamations which could no longer be restrained in a melody of English, Italian, French, German, Spanish and other tongues.

After accompanying the pontiff to a little procession of their own, proceeding to the Sistine chapel to return thanks for the honor accorded them. There the pontifical singers intoned the Ambrosian hymn, after which the prayer of thanksgiving for the new creations. On leaving the chapel all the new cardinals were again embraced by their colleagues.

Secret Consistory Is Held.

After the public had dispersed all the cardinals joined the pope in the hall of

DEMONS RACING FOR GRAND PRIZE

World's Greatest Speed
Fiends in Annual Contest at Savannah.

FAST TIME IS MADE

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 30.—The third international road race for the international grand prize for the Automobile Club of America, run here today, was open to all cars of American and foreign manufacture. The winner of the great event not only captures the $5,000 gold trophy, but also approximately $20,000 in prize money.

The race, covering a distance of 411.36 miles, requires the circling of the grand prize race course of 17.14 miles twenty-four times. The sixteen cars entered started at intervals of thirty seconds.

The entries were as follows:

No.	Car.	Driver.
41	Flat	Louis Wagner.

Starter Fred Wagner sent the grand prize racers off promptly. The crowd gave each driver a rousing cheer as they got under way at thirty-second intervals beginning at 9 o'clock. Ralph Mulford, winner of the Vanderbilt cup, received an ovation.

Thousands of persons left comfortable beds at an early hour today to see the start of the grand prize race at 9 o'clock. The surface of the ground became frozen over night, rendering the course much faster and safer than had been anticipated. Although the day was bitter cold, the sun shone out brightly.

Fast Time at the Outset.

Some fast time was made on the first lap. Bragg made it in 13:01-13 seconds faster than the fastest lap in the Vanderbilt. Bruce Brown made it in 13:07 and Wagner in 13:08, all in Fiat cars. Ralph De Palma made the round in 13:15 and Hemery in 13:07. Bragg's time was almost 70 miles an hour.

Record-breaking time was also made in the second lap, which Bruce Brown made in 12:47, Wagner in 12:58 and Bragg in 12:50. Hemery made it in 13:06. Bragg was leading the race three seconds ahead of Bruce Brown.

Bragg led the race at the end of the third lap, one second ahead of Bruce Brown. The former's time was 38:51 and the latter's 38:52. De Palma was third with 39:49.

Cobs, driving a Buick 100 was forced out of the race by a broken steering gear. No one was hurt.

Eddie Hearne took the lead in the fifth lap with 66:54. Caleb Bragg was second with 67:23. Mulford third with 68:06 and Patschke fourth with 68:10. Wisbart is back in the race after repairing his engine. Hemery and Bob Burman both reported delay by engine trouble.

Hearne led in the sixth lap with 80:15. Patschke crept into second place with 81:52. Wagner was third with 81:40. Mulford fourth with 81:54. Burman and Hemery abandoned the race on account of engine trouble.

Racing in the Ninth.

Eddie Hearne took his Benz to the front in the ninth lap, which he finished

JOHNSON TAKES TURKEY IN JAIL

Man Who Leaves Wife and Children to Starve is Sentenced.

HAS ANOTHER LADY

William P. Johnson got by pretty well without supporting his wife and children until he began to prate about a good looking Fort Wayne woman and this aroused in Mrs. Johnson's breast that thing which hath hell's star fury backed off the board.

As a result William P. matriculated at the county jail this noon at Sheriff Reichelderfer's Thanksgiving feast, where he had plenty of victuals for the department of his anatomy most used for storing it away but he had some food for thought that probably didn't go down as well as the jailer's feast.

In the meantime Mrs. Johnson is going back to her little family at Woodburn. She will consult the township trustee and if it is found that she can get the little ones cared for it is probable that the sire will spend some time in jail.

Johnson has three children, twelve, ten and eight years of age and they haven't clothing enough to permit them to attend school, they have little to eat and only such fuel as they can scrape together by their own exertions. In the meantime the father is earning 17 1/2 cents an hour, paying a good price to live in a comfortable boarding house and, according to his own admission is "keeping company" with another woman. Judge Mungovan gave him an awful scolding.

He told him he didn't average up with the general run of the brute creation and that he ought to be sent to the penitentiary. Johnson produced a memorandum which indicated that he had sent his wife part of his earnings but the judge very plainly told him he thought the account had been made up since his arrest and that it was invented to save himself from punishment.

Johnson has a married daughter by a previous marriage and when she tried to talk with him in his cell he declined to have anything to say to her.

CHILD FATALLY SCALDED.

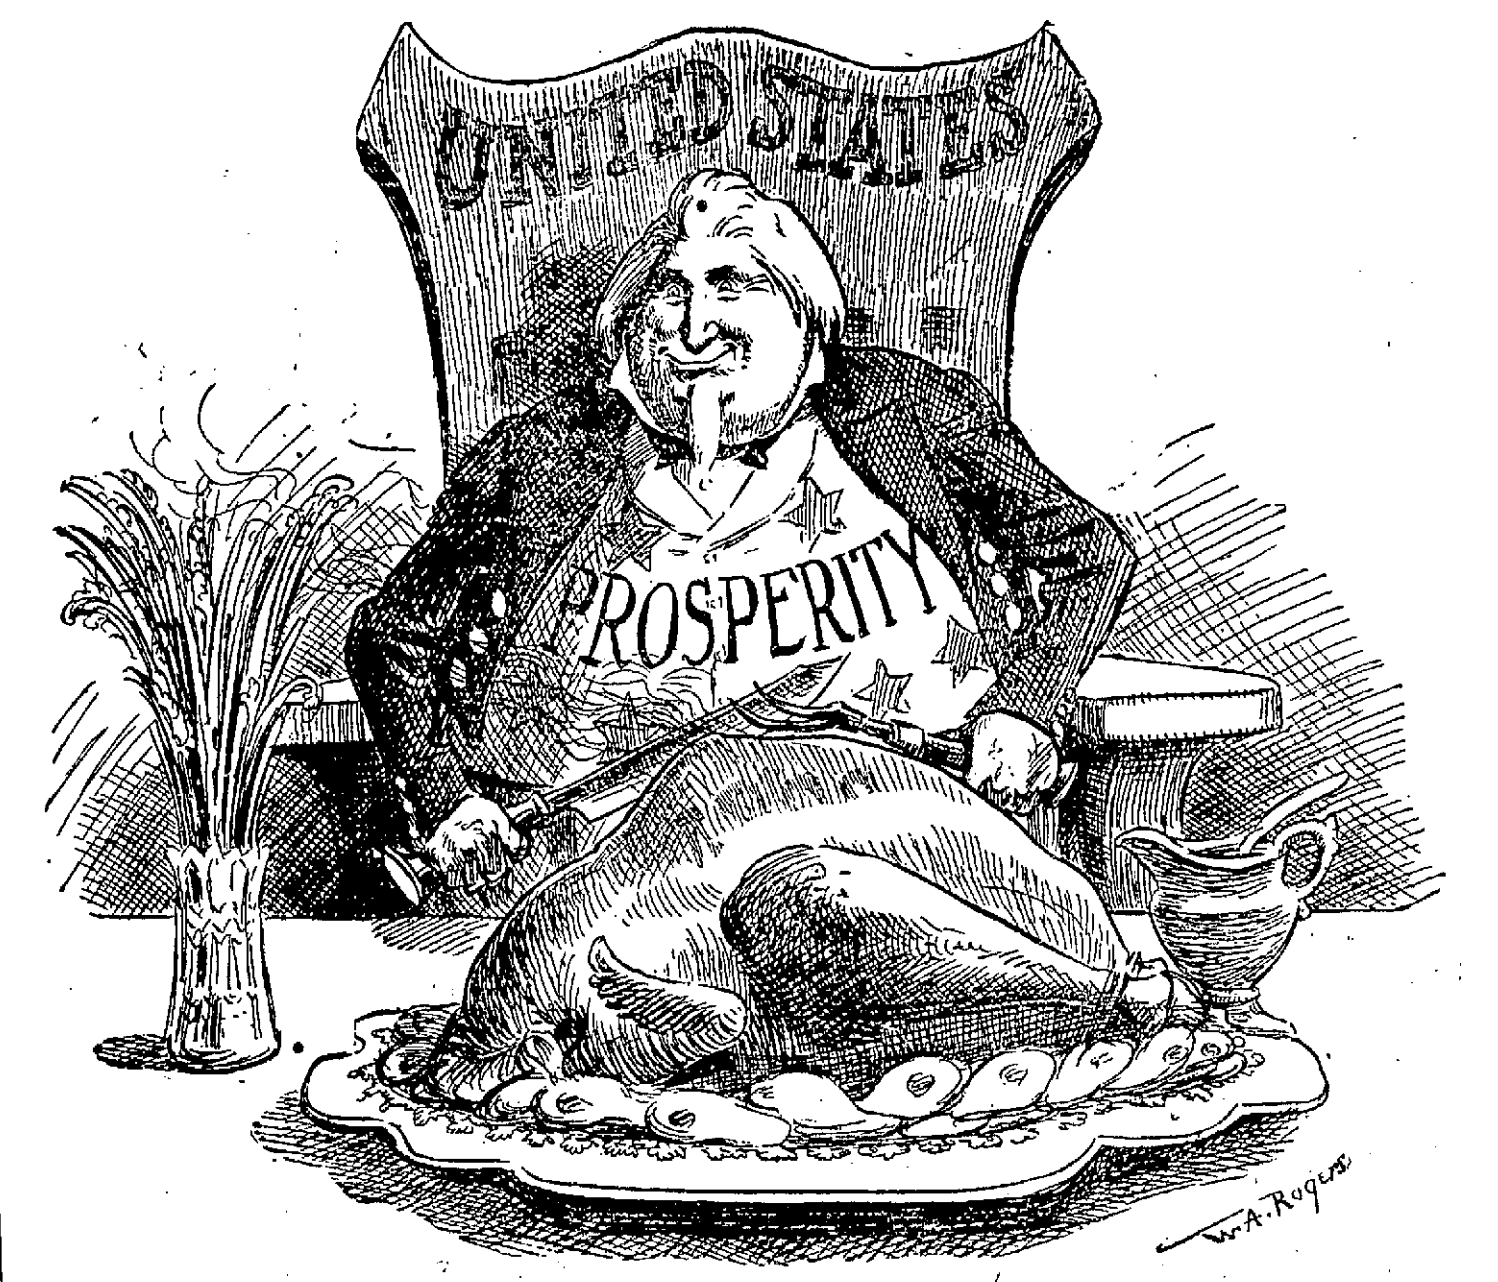

Bedford, Ind., Nov. 30.—Clapping his hands with pleasure at the sight of his grandmother, Charlie, age 2, son of Louis Yankie, ran headlong into a kettle of boiling water. He was severely scalded and the injuries will probably prove fatal.

ONE CENT A YEAR FOR SUPPORT OF HIS WIFE.

Muncie, Ind., Nov. 30.—Spending 25 cents on his wife in the last of twenty-five years of marriage life is not contributing sufficiently enough for her support, is the opinion of Judge Frank Ellis, of the circuit court, who granted a divorce to Laura Strong from Silas Strong.

The husband did not consent.

Test. Mrs. Strong said that from the time of their marriage she was forced to make her own living and that the only money actually spent by the husband for her was a quarter of a dollar.

BIG FORT WAYNE CONCERN LANDS $80,000 CONTRACT

Western Gas Will Furnish the Valves and Connections for Big Coke Oven Plant at Bethlehem, Pa.

A deal involving the consumption of 900 tons of metal and $80,000 has just been consummated by the Western Gas Construction company. It is a contract to furnish the valves and connections for a mammoth coke oven plant for the Bethlehem Steel company, of Bethlehem, Pa., and it was secured against great competition, in which all of the leading gas making machinery people of the country were participants. The negotiation have been in progress for four months and the Western Gas Construction company had a representative in the field during the entire time.

This contract was sub-let by the Dietrich-March company, which has a contract of installing for the steel company a plant that will have a capacity of 15,000,000 feet of gas per day. It is by far the greatest and most important contract of its kind of the year.

It means plenty of work at the plant of the Western Gas Construction company the coming winter months. Every department—including the foundry, the machine shop, the boiler shop and the pipe shop—will come in for a part of it.

and with the other work that comes to the plant, will give the employees all they can do, a condition they will welcome, for business of that kind has not been quite up to the standard of former years. The company has to complete the contract within five months.

The Western Gas Construction company furnished the valves and connections for the big plants of the steel company at Joliet and Gary, which are giving good satisfaction and were, perhaps, a great factor in bringing to the company the big contract closed up last Tuesday.

There is an increase in the inquiries concerning the products of the Western Gas Construction company's plant and the management is greatly encouraged thereby. One of the officials said last night that the company is getting other orders—some of them not very important, but "good fillers" in connection with the big contract. He predicted increased capacity, not alone in the gas machinery and holder line, but in all of the industries in which iron and steel figure. He is quite jubilant over the deal just consummated, especially as it was secured in a field where competition was intense.

FORT WAYNE GIVES THANKS IN DAY OF VARIED PROGRAM

Business is Suspended and Observance of Holiday in the City is Very General.

With business practically suspended, special services in many of the churches, great feasts in homes, hotels and public institutions and a varied program of social events and amusement offerings, Fort Wayne has given herself over today to a universal observance of the Thanksgiving holiday.

Wegther conditions are very nearly ideal, and the wintry tang in the atmosphere lent an additional zest to the holiday occasion, brightened by flashes of sunshine that left little to be desired in the contribution of the weather man.

None of the shops and factories of the city opened for business today, and in the commercial district almost universal closing was the rule, while the public buildings were for the most part deserted. The postoffice closed at 10 o'clock after one city delivery of mail had been made, and the rural carriers did not go out upon their routes at all. Nearly all the drugstores in the city closed for the afternoon.

Travel Is Very Heavy.

Holiday travel, both in and out of the city, is very heavy, and the interurban cars which deposited great loads of incoming humanity at the interurban station were immediately boarded by another crowd outward bound to spend the day with friends at other points.

The day's big feature in traffic arrangements was the formal opening of the subway beneath the Pennsylvania tracks at Broadway, and cars passed through it for the first time this morning. This enabled the city and the interurban lines to go back to the old routing and the regular schedules, using Broadway, Main and Pearl streets as the ease before the track elevation was begun. The work at Broadway was begun. The driveway at the west side of the subway was opened yesterday afternoon, but cars were not permitted to use the subway until today.

Hotels Near Deserted.

As is invariably the case at the Thanksgiving holiday, the hotels of the city are very near deserted, so far as the traveling public is concerned, for every man "on the road" makes an especial effort to get home to spend the holiday with his family. All the hotels, however, are preparing elaborate Thanksgiving menus, and at the dinner hour tonight they are certain to be thronged by city guests. In some instances it was expected that guests might have to be asked to wait for tables on account of the rush.

At the Anthony tonight, in addition to the regular Thanksgiving dinner, the Friars will have a banquet, with covers laid for eighty. The dinner is served at 6 o'clock.

Down town during the earlier hours of the day the streets were almost deserted, and for the first time in many years the saloons were not open for business on the Thanksgiving holiday.

Program at State School.

Children at the state school participated in a special Thanksgiving program at the institution chapel this morning. It was preceded by a band concert, and the feature of the entertainment was a Thanksgiving pageant typifying the landing of the Pilgrims the first Thanksgiving, and the build-

ELDER WOMAN IS SORE AT VERDICT

Mother of Murdered Man Rails at Denver Kind of Justice.

MRS. PATTERSON FREE

Denver, Colo., Nov. 30.—Mrs. Mary K. Patterson, mother of Charles A. Patterson, slain by his wife, Gertrude Gibson Patterson, who was freed yesterday from the charge of murder, is traveling eastward to her home in Chicago today. A disappointed woman, Mrs. Gertrude Gibson Patterson today in Denver is happy.

Happy in the freedom which until yesterday she had been denied since she shot her husband on the sidewalk in a Denver suburb on Sept. 25 last.

Mrs. Mary Patterson spoke bitterly of the jury's verdict. "I did not come here for revenge," she said at the depot just before her train started for the east. "I came to see justice done, but this brand of justice is a disgrace to Denver."

Acquitted Woman Talks.

Surrounded by her mother, her father, a sister and a brother, Mrs. Gertrude Gibson Patterson today discussed her case.

"My life has been a tragedy," she said. "I might say a melodrama, in which sin and wickedness predominated. I want it in the future to be a poem—a poem of goodness, of sunshine and happiness and purity."

"I do not know where I shall live, or what I shall do. I think I shall stay right here in Denver for a while at least. I want to blot out the past. I'll admit that in the history of my life there have been many secret pages. The closing chapters I want to be quiet."

Verdict Long Delayed.

The verdict was announced in the district court at 2:34 p. m., more than two hours after the jury had agreed; the long wait carrying with it an agony of suspense for the woman on trial, resulting from the absence of Judge Allen, who was attending the funeral of his colleague, Judge Carlton M. Bliss.

As the clerk finished reading the verdict Mrs. Patterson sprang to her feet and caught the outstretched hand of her attorney. From outside the court room came a great roar of cheers; inside, the crowd was quiet and orderly.

But as court adjourned and Mrs. Patterson stepped forward to thank the jury, the crowd surged in on her, overwhelming her with congratulations, and her efforts to reach the jury were in vain.

Gives Thanks to Jurors.

Later four of the jurors called on her as she was making ready to leave the jail. To them she expressed her thanks, and through them her gratitude to the rest of the jury.

When Mrs. Patterson stepped from the court building for the last time to make the journey to the jail—a journey, that for the last ten days she had made four times a day, through a lane of curious humanity—the space between the court house and the jail was packed with a cheering crowd.

On the arm of her attorney she struggled through the crowd—men trying to shake hands and women striving to kiss her. Behind her, both hands waving in the air, came her father, shouting his joy. Close behind him came her mother and sister, both in tears.

At the jail preparations for leaving were quickly made. It was just 3 o'clock when Mrs. Patterson stepped through the barred doors and into an automobile that carried her to the hotel at which her family is staying. As she passed through the jail rotunda, gay with Thanksgiving decorations, the 150 or more prisoners gave her a round of cheers.

Two First Voted for Conviction.

At no time in the deliberations of the jury were there more than two votes for conviction. Four ballots were taken, the first resulting in ten for acquittal and two for conviction of murder in the first degree. This ballot was taken Tuesday night, after the jury, which retired at 9:45 p. m., had made its preliminary survey of the evidence and the instructions. After this ballot the jury went to bed.

The second ballot was taken soon after the jury returned from breakfast, resulting as the first. An hour's discussion followed and the third ballot was taken. It stood 11 to 1 for acquittal. At 11:15 o'clock yesterday morning the jury took its fourth vote. It was solid for acquittal.

The courthouse was deserted when the first news of a verdict was learned. Because of Judge Bliss' funeral all courts had adjourned and all county offices were closed. Only the two bailiffs in charge of the jury, a few deputy sheriffs, and a few newspaper men were on the ground.

Two Hours of Suffering.

Word was sent to Judge Allen at the cemetery, but it was more than two hours before he was able to reach the scene—hours of suffering for Mrs. Patterson and of fruitless speculation for others.

A little after noon the jury filed out for dinner. When the twelve men returned, an hour later, all of them apparently in a cheerful mood, the first whisper went around that it was an acquittal.

The news of the agreement spread quickly through the city, and from every direction a great crowd made its way to the court room. Admittance was denied to all until a few minutes before the jury was brought down, and when the doors were opened only a small part of the throng was able to crowd into the building.

How the Verdict Was Given.

Mrs. Patterson was brought into

SLOW WORK IN GETTING JURY

One Juror to Each Seventy Veniremen in McNamara Murder Trial.

HALTS FOR HOLIDAY

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 30.—Progressing at the rate of one sworn juror for every seventy veniremen drawn from the jury wheel, the McNamara trial was stopped for a legal holiday today with eight sworn jurors and two talesmen passed for cause in the jury box. The other two seats in the box were officially vacant, the only man remaining from the eleventh venire having escaped being called into the box by the considerate action of Judge Bordwell, who adjourned court twenty minutes ahead of time with instruction that the veniremen should return Friday morning.

About fifty men comprised in the twelfth venire were notified today by deputy sheriffs to appear at the same time.

The venire makes the total number of men drawn thus far 605, of whom but 130 have reached the jury box for interrogation as to fitness. Judge Bordwell has weeded out hundreds of others for physical and personal reasons, and a small majority have not been reached with summonses this, oddly enough, was the cause with Venireman George N. Lockwood, drawn on the eleventh venire for whose alleged bribery Bert H. Franklin, a former deputy United States Marshal was arrested. Lockwood was represented to be out of the county. Franklin ate Thanksgiving dinner with his family, being at liberty on $5,000 cash bond. He had a long talk in the course of the day with his counsel, Henry T. Gage, former governor of California.

WILL BE STORMY SESSION.

Mineworkers' Convention Next Month Promises to Be Turbulent.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 30.—What gives promise of being the most turbulent and probably the most important convention in the history of the United Mine Workers will open here for a three weeks session on January 15 next, the leasing of the coal and other arrangements having just been completed by Secretary-Treasurer Edwin Perry of the organization. It is expected there will be from 1,200 to 1,500 delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada in attendance.

The questions stand out foremost before the miners as the time for the international meeting approaches. One of these is the investigation of the charges made by John Mitchell, a former president of the organization at the recent conference of the American Federation of Labor that the last miners' convention, held at Columbus, O., was rigged and the fact was due to the passing of the resolution preventing members of the miners' union being connected with the National Civic Federation, in which Mitchell held an office paying $6,000 a year.

Thomas L. Lewis, of Bridgeport, Ohio, who was present at the miners' at the time, denied the charge on the floor of the labor convention and said he would demand a full investigation when the miners meet. The question of a new wage scale is another very important matter to come before the miners. The present contracts with the operators expire March 31, 1912, and it is said the miners will ask a much higher rate before signing up again.

International officers will be chosen at the general balloting to be held December 15, but will not go into office until next April.

PASS FINAL TEST.

Floyd Brinkerhoff, of Booneville, New York, and William G. Morton, of Orem, O., passed the final examination at the local army recruiting station Wednesday and were sent to the Columbus recruit barracks. Harry V. Andrews, of New Straitsville, O., who enlisted early in the week, was unable to join them as he is only eighteen years of age and must first obtain the consent of his parents to the enlistment, and this consent has not yet been obtained.

HAS A LITTLE WAR OF ITS OWN

Great Britain's Fight in India Like Our Indian Campaigns.

CLASHES WITH ABORS

London, Nov. 30.—While the soldiers of Italy and Turkey and the revolutionists in China and Mexico are showing what a cruel, cruel world this is, the British government is as little war all to itself, provided General Bower's army has not damaged another public wheel and the mules are not kicking anybody overboard. Although it sounds as if it might be a navy in question, the use of the word army more nearly approaches what is meant. The sun and substance of the matter is this: About two months ago the British war office decided to declare war against the Abors, and London thinks by this time its army has commenced the war to avenge the murder of two officers, Dr. J. D. Gregorson and Mr. Noel Williamson, by natives last spring.

The Abor country is several thousand miles distant from Calcutta, where the soldiers and mules were loaded on steamboats to begin a water journey to the base of operations. The chief waterway used by the steamboat army is the Brahmaputra river. On the way through Assam, the Battani, conveying the thirty-second Sikh pioneers and mules, was delayed because of injury to her paddle wheel, and the Serani got mixed up with the mud banks. Those little items were reported by Major General Bower, C. B., who is in command, and so far as the outside world is concerned his reports as to battles won and lost will make him ma sort of war correspondent.

The Abors are excellent shots with the bow and arrow, and their knowledge of the wild, hilly country in which they live is expected to make them elusive enemies. In fighting them the English soldiers and Sikh pioneers will be confronted with many of the dangers that the pioneers in this country had to contend with when the Indians troubled them. The Abors poison many of their arrows with arsenic or the germ of tetanus, the latter being obtained by burying the arrowheads in decayed animal matter. Since the head of the arrow is barbed and detachable from the shaft so that it cannot be withdrawn through or cut out.

Love of adornment is one of the weaknesses of the Abor, male or female. Men and women alike pierce their ears so that they may wear bulky bamboo ornaments in the lobes. All are highly superstitious, as is shown by the charms they wear. Some of them are addicted to smoking, using pipes of native and Tibetan manufacture. One reason why the expedition against them was sent by water instead of by rail was to draw attention to the great waterways of Bengal and Assam and the need of their improvement. The rivers are neglected by the government of India and the provincial governments to such an extent that the steamboat companies had to keep up the lights and buoys.

court before the jury entered. She had been apprised of the probable outcome, and, seated beside her counsel, she chatted with him merrily, in striking contrast to her demeanor of the last few days.

The prisoner was accompanied in court by the matron of the jail. In response to the usual formal questions, J. J. Flint, foreman of the jury, arose. He looked for a moment at the prisoner without changing of countenance. Then came the words that meant everything to the young woman on trial:

"Not guilty," and the whole jury broke into smiles.

The jury was composed completely of married men, their ages averaging 35 years. The verdict hung on Trip Abroad. The verdict hung, it is declared, upon Mrs. Patterson's trip to Europe with another man after she had married Patterson. Whether this trip was taken with her husband's knowledge or consent, after he had received $1,500 from the man with whom she went abroad, as she contended, or whether she had withheld from Patterson the true nature of the trip, as the state contended, was the subject, it is said, with which most of the jury's discussion dealt.

IRISH PLAY LEADS TO RIOT IN NEW YORK — POLICE MAKE ARRESTS

THE IRISH PLAYERS

During the first performance of "The Play Boy of the West" in New York city, several hundred in the audience resented what they declared to be insults to the Irish race and attempted to stop the performance. Beginning with hoots and catcalls from every part of the house, the disorder grew until eggs, potatoes, pieces of bread and other missiles flew over the footlights and the uproar drowned out the voices of the players, even to those seated in the first row.

Police were called in and heads were cracked on both sides before quiet was restored. Several arrests were made and the play proceeded.

STUDENTS SEIZE CITY STREET CAR

College Boys Dismantle It in Celebrating Football Victory.

WAS A LIVELY TIME

Officials of the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company are now getting reports on a lively incident at Lafayette Monday night when students of Purdue university in celebrating a football victory seized one of the company's city cars in West Lafayette and completely dismantled it.

Boarding the car in force the college boys simply took charge of it, removing the fare registers, bells, bell-cord and everything else movable and breaking considerable glass in the demonstration of joy. The conductor and motorman were powerless against the crowd, and it was not until the students had bent a retreat that they again secured command of the car. In order to thwart a possible repetition of the outbreak, Superintendent Levering, discontinued street car service on the college line for the remainder of the night, and belated students were compelled to choose between chartering hacks and walking to the university.

It is expected that the new pay-as-you-enter cars which have been ordered by the Fort Wayne company for the Logansport and Lafayette city lines will be delivered early in the new year.

DEMONS RACING FOR GRAND PRIZE

In 122 minutes and 3 seconds. Wagner in his Fiat was second with 122:23; Mulford was third with 123:03; Bragg was fourth with 123:55. Patschke had not been reported.

Patschke was out of the race when his car jumped the track at Montgomery cross roads in the ninth lap. No one was hurt.

To the amazement of everyone Henry flashed by the stands during the tenth lap, after it had been announced he was out. Henry is six laps behind. He came finished the tenth in the lead with 135:19. Wagner was second with 136:56. Bragg was third with 137:11. Bruce Brown fourth with 137:10.

Hearne passed Wagner on the eleventh lap when the latter was forced to stop at the pits for oil. It was the first time Wagner had been passed.

World's Record Broken. Eddie Hearne driving a Benz broke the world's record for 205 miles, one-half the distance of the grand prize race, averaging 76.2 miles an hour against the 74.9 miles an hour average for 202 miles in the Vanderbilt cup race.

Hearne still led in the eleventh lap with 148:44. Wagner was second, with 152:14. Bruce Brown was third, with 152:30. De Palma was fourth, with 153:34.

THINK VESSEL LOST IN STORM.

Wreckage on Lake Superior Leads Marine Men to Suspect Disaster.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 30.—That some vessel was lost in the fierce storm of Tuesday on Lake Superior is the theory of marine men here from the reports of wreckage off Vermilion Point.

The steamers Wilpen and Mueller arrived last night and reported passing through large quantities of short timber. Some think the unfortunate steamer is the Jay Gould, which is said to have had a cargo of short lumber and has not yet been reported.

If reports are confirmed it will add another boat to the long list which has found a resting place in that section, known as "The graveyard" of the lakes, for in the neighborhood of Whitefish and Vermilion more boats have been lost than at any other place on the lakes.

JOSEPH'S SNAKE HAD 103 RATTLES

Mr. Sponselor Counted 'Em and Says He Ought to Know.

HEARD A MILE AWAY

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 30.—Joseph Sponselor, who lives at the sawmill on the White Mountain Indian reservation, recently killed a rattlesnake with 103 rattles and as big around as his leg above the knee. Sponselor heard the snake rattle three-quarters of a mile away from his house and followed the noise until he discovered its source.

News of the killing of this Brobdignagian serpent was received here in a letter from Mrs. Loretta Hanson, of Mesa, to her daughter, Mrs. Clarence Standage. Mrs. Hanson is spending the summer on the reservation and heard of the occurrence through Sponselor.

One evening Sponselor heard a peculiar whirring noise which he could not identify. Taking his shotgun, he went out to investigate. He walked three-quarters of a mile before he found where the noise came from. A monstrous snake was shaking a string of rattles more than a foot long.

Sponselor did not wait to find out what the snake was rattling about, but blazed away. When the huge serpent was dead he approached and immediately was struck by the great number of rattles. Counting he found 103.

The snake was so large and it had so many rattles that it was taken to the trading post and preserved in alcohol. It is still there, the wonder of all who see it. All agree that they have never heard of such a snake.

But old timers in Phoenix are skeptical. If the snake really has 103 rattles, they say it exceeds all records. Vernon Clark says he heard of one with forty-two rattles. Twenty is an unusually high number, found only upon the oldest and largest snakes.

Mrs. Hanson said in her letter that the rattler Sponselor killed must be over 300 years old. Evidently they believe in the White mountains that a snake grows only one rattle in three years. There is a common belief that the rattlesnake grows one a year, but experts say that this is a mistake. Often a snake will grow several rattles in a season, and when the string gets long some are frequently worn off or lost through accident.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

GUESTS FLEE IN THEIR NIGHTIES

Explosion at Hartford City Hotel Causes Panic Among Lodgers—No One Hurt.

Hartford City, Ind., Nov. 30.—An explosion of gasoline under a coffee urn in the restaurant annex of the Interurban hotel at Washington and Jefferson streets, of this city, slightly damaged the diningroom and caused a panic among the thirty-two guests about 3 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Aroused by the cry of fire, when an employee raced through the corridors of the building screaming at the top of his voice, the guests fled from their rooms in various stages of undress and sought safety in flight. Jumping from their beds, the sleepers hurriedly collected such of their effects as they could conveniently carry in their arms and rushed pell mell into the hallways on the second floor, where, in scant attire and shivering in the early morning cold, they paused long enough to make hasty toilet before dashing out of the building into twenty above zero temperature.

The blaze proved of little consequence, but most of the guests, badly frightened and thoroughly awakened, did not venture back to bed, returning to their rooms only long enough to don more comfortable clothing and to complete their toilet.

DISTRICT MEET FOR DECATUR.

Knights of Pythias to Hold Annual Gathering at Adams County Town.

Decatur, Ind., Nov. 30.—The Knights of Pythias of this city have received word from A. R. Kuyette, of Bluffton, deputy grand chancellor for the sixth district, that Decatur has been selected for the next district meeting, which will be held in this city on February 20 of next year. It will be remembered that there were several cities in line for the securing of this gathering. The news was learned Tuesday, and was received with great pleasure by all the members.

The district includes the following cities, which will send at least one representative to the meeting: Portland, Hartford City, Roll, Bluffton, Dunkirk, Belkney, Ossian, Berne, Geneva and Decatur. In a week or two another meeting will be held when a committee will be named to look after arrangements for the occasion and from now on the home lodge will make preparations to entertain their visitors and show their esteem for their many visiting brethren who will be present. The program will be arranged in the near future.

THE TEST OF MERIT

Fort Wayne People Are Given Convincing Proof.

No better test of any article can be made than the test of time and this is particularly true of a kidney medicine. Doan's Kidney Pills have stood this test and stood it well. What better proof of the merits of this remedy could you demand than the statement of a Fort Wayne resident who has been cured and has stayed cured?

Read the following:
George Frey, of 1255 Maumee street, Fort Wayne, Ind., says: "I never found another remedy of such great merit as Doan's Kidney Pills. My kidneys were weak and my back pained me intensely. In a short time after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Meyer Bros. Co.'s Drug Store, my trouble was corrected and I enjoyed much better health." (Statement given December 2, 1908.)

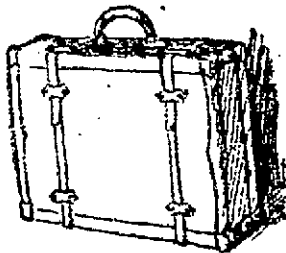

Re-endorsement.
On July 1, 1910, Mr. Frey said: "Since I took Doan's Kidney Pills I have had little or no trouble from my kidneys. It always gives me pleasure to make the merits of this remedy known."
For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

INCREASING THE PREMIUM ON MURDER.

Human life is cheap in this country and every day it is bid lower. Each murderer or murderess turned loose makes the bloody-minded more free with their crimes. It is becoming positively a fashion to kill. The unwritten law in a certain class of capital homicides has taken almost complete precedence of the statute law. There will be a day of reckoning and a day of rue in the land. "Vengeance is mine" it is sacredly written, but vengeance of blood is becoming the prerogative of whomsoever chooses to take it. A country that writes the red record of more murders than all the rest of the civilized world together must some day answer for its tolerance of bloodshed. Murder unpunished of justice means more murder; it means mob law; it means contempt for all moral and Christian precept. It is a well known fact in criminal jurisprudence that it is difficult to convict a woman of murder and almost impossible to get juries to condemn with the utmost rigors of the law. It is also recognized that the modernized principle of the "unwritten law" in the case of man as well as woman most frequently prevails over the statutes. "Dementia Americana," or some equally efficacious claptrap is injected into the minds of a jury or is there already, and red-handed murder goes scot free with none to molest or make afraid. The Patterson woman, just acquitted in Denver, admitted her crime, its circumstances and even illustrated the manner of it. Her plea was a curious compound of insanity, fear and self-defense. She slew her consumptive husband when there was nothing to prevent her fleeing even in the alleged moment of his passion and frenzy to complete safety. He was a beast and a leper, it must be admitted. But killing him was murder. She goes acquit, as her soiled sisters before her in many a case have gone. So justice is travestied again and the premium on murder is once more increased.

THANKSGIVING.

The people of the nation again unite this day to attempt a count of their blessings and render some acknowledgement in gratitude to the Giver of them. In a land fat with abundance, smiling with plenty, humming with industry and glowing with prosperity, the rendering of thanks to an indulgent providence for vouchsafement of these blessings and many others should not be held either a severe test of gratitude or any extravagance of avowal. During the year just passing this nation has had constant example of the blessings of God. Harvests were rich and sufficient, employment has been abundant and well required, social order has had no serious disturbance, the land has enjoyed peace with all the world, no general disaster has overtaken us, pestilence has passed us by, and, in short, the procession of blessings has been constant and unvarying. It is the record of many years precedent, enlarged and enriched, happily repeated.

Thanksgiving is not a matter of swelling anthem and glowing discourse, of groaning table and hospitable intermingling. In the heart is thanksgiving, if it be anywhere, and out of the heart it must come. It is not the formal sentiment of an annual occasion fixed by proclamation and elaborately prepared for like a pagan festival, but the voice of the spirit acknowledging that God is good and that out of the abundance of His mercy are His blessings cast at the feet of mankind. The true acknowledgement is in obedience.

For God is paid when man receives;
To enjoy is to obey.

But the day has come to have special and hearty significance as the festival of the hearthstone and the family. It is a day of home-coming and reunion, and it is hallowed by the sweetest as well as most sacred sentiments and the tenderest memories that can fill the breast. No holiday in the calendar can kindle such anticipations. From the ends of the earth it turns wandering footsteps to the homeward road and across the old threshold the absent bound to reunite at the fireside may a broken family circle. The day is itself a blessing not the least among the gifts which God's free bounty gives. Let it be not cast away.

Wall street's new-found tolerance of The Colonel is fairly clear evidence that its terror and hatred of him a few short years ago were more a cultivated state of mind than a conviction of feeling. Big business has had recent occasion to realize that the persecution of which it complained and at which it roared was the public sentiment of the time—and now.

After several years of immunity from saloons our neighboring city of Auburn has reaffirmed the wisdom of such conditions and voted to continue that state of affairs. The victory is the more notable, even with a narrow majority, because of the fact that Auburn's neighbor, Garrett, only four miles away, voted the saloons back, and it was feared by many at heart opposed to the saloons that drinking places in a rival trading point so near by would operate harmfully to Auburn's business interests. The results in these two little cities will afford an interesting study.

Wharton Barker's testimony before the senate interstate commerce committee sounds more than a little like some of the populist speeches Wharton Barker made in the erstwhile days of gunning for the presidency.

FORT WAYNE'S FIRST NEEDS.

Editor of The Sentinel: I have no desire to discredit the movement so general at the present in Fort Wayne for civic beautification. But it does seem to me that very much that is being said—I was going to say, and "being done," but nothing is being done—on the subject, outrails common sense. We would have parks and boulevards and beautification of the rivers. Every ward in the city has its organization. Every organization is urging the issue of bonds to further the purchase of grounds along the rivers and lands for parks in various parts of the city. No one seemingly stops to think of the vast expense it will be to improve the river banks, build the boulevards and beautify the parks.

No one has suggested that we have hundreds of miles of streets that are not yet paved and hundreds of miles of sidewalks yet to be constructed. No one has suggested that there ought to be constructed yet double the water mains that we now have. The new and the untold are the things that appeal to our citizens' committees. They would aim at the stars in their aspirations for beautification. Dirty alleys, muddy streets, unflushed sewers, the open cesspools of the rivers are forgotten in the thought of new boulevards and new parks.

I rode over several miles of our unpaved streets on Sunday last in a buggy. I wished at the time, and still wish, that some of our ardent advocates of new things could have seen these old streets, almost impassable. The residents along the streets told me that their condition was fine now as compared with what they would be long before summer came again. They said that in case of fire, during the muddy season, their homes would be at the mercy of the flames, for no fire apparatus could reach them, and garbage collectors could not get to them.

I wonder, while such conditions as these exist, why we should be planning miles of new boulevards and new parks. Our civic boosters remind me much of a man I knew years ago. He had a farm of about one hundred acres of very fertile land, six miles from the city, that he planned to make into an ideal fruit farm. He had a beautiful colored plot of it, showing the winding walks and driveways, all hedged about with different kinds of shrubbery and flowering plants and shade trees. The whole land was subdivided into plots for various kinds of fruits—strawberries, currants, gooseberries, blackberries and raspberries, cherries, peaches, and pears, and apples. He gave me a colored chart of the farm and ecstatically talked of it and his plans. He was a civil engineer and a poet, the same in one. As a landscape gardener on paper, he was a dream; as a word painter he was an artist. I think on these things he could outrank our present-day civic beautifiers.

He told me of laying out his walks and drives and planting the hedge rows, and of the acres of different fruits he put out year after year, for three years. I listened to his stories. Finally one day I was in the neighborhood of the promised paradise and took the time to look it over. Imagine my surprise at the conditions. While he had planted and planted, he had never tended, and the whole thing had grown weedy and brambles and briars. It was a sickening sight. The walks and drives had been laid out all right and as planned, and much of the bordering shrubbery planted, but the whole thing was a mess—a maddening mass of tangled weeds and bushes and matted and matted grass. He had mortgaged the place to make the improvements, and the mortgage, like the weeds and briars, had been growing and growing until at the time of my visit it had outgrown the value of the property. The whole junk heap sold at foreclosure sale and the high art fruit farm was dismantled; the ground re-cleared and turned again into a prosaic farm for the raising of potatoes and corn and other ordinary farm products.

There may be no lesson in this experiment and experience for the mass of our people, but I am frank to say there ought to be. We ought to learn from it and similar experiments not to bite off more than we can chew; that it is wise always to go slow if we would learn to peddle; that it is not wise to plunge into debt for what we can well do without; that it is better to do things needing to be done, rather than to neglect them—to try to do unnecessary things.

OLD CITIZEN.

LAFOLLETTE ON MCKINLEY.

The following interesting passage is found in the December installment of LaFollette's Autobiography, which is just beginning in the American Magazine:

"I always felt that McKinley represented the newer view. Of course, McKinley was a high protectionist, but on the great new questions as they arose, he was generally on the side of the public and against private interests."

"And this the people instinctively sensed. In my own state of Wisconsin during the campaign for the republican nomination in 1896, I was strongly for McKinley, but the old machine leaders, Payne, Sawyer, Spooner, Plaster and Keyes, all worked vigorously for Reed. Reed had big business with him; but the sentiment in the state was too strong for the bosses. The Wisconsin delegation to the St. Louis convention, of which I had been elected as an anti-machine member, was instructed for and stood solid for McKinley."

"I am saying this notwithstanding McKinley's relationship with Mark Hanna. The chief incentive behind Hanna's support of McKinley, I am convinced, was the honest love he felt for his friend. McKinley inspired affection of that sort. And Hanna, having come largely into control of the republican organization of money, he tried to bring all the elements together in harmony. The first and only time I ever met him was at the St. Louis convention. He requested me to come and see him. He was extremely cordial, almost affectionate. I remember he put his arm around me and told me of his relations with McKinley. He told me—and this was the object of the meeting—that he felt sure that McKinley would like to see Payne on the national committee from Wisconsin. He understood, he said, that I was making a fight on Payne, but hoped that in the interest of harmony I would stand for Payne's selection. I told him very earnestly about our struggle in Wisconsin, that a great movement had started there which could not be arrested or diverted, that Payne and his associates stood for the destruction of representative government, and that we could make no truce with them. Mr. Hanna's manner changed abruptly, and the interview terminated."

Chance for Political Party.

San Francisco Post: "The political party in the United States which will tackle the problem of regulating or eliminating the middleman will have little difficulty in commanding itself to public favor, and will find it a much surer and saner way of gaining the confidence of the country than by prolonged and futile tariff discussion."

Better Farming a Factor.

Atlantic Journal: "Men are awakening to the truth that the solution of this problem lies very largely in improved agricultural conditions. In the production of more food through modern methods of farming and in the development of rural life along more attractive lines."

W. E. D. STOKES.

"I SAID IF IT'S ONE CENT OR DEATH, THEN GIVE ME DEATH."

Millionaire W. E. D. Stokes, testifying in New York against the two show girls, Ethel Conrad and Lillian Graham, who are being tried on a charge of attempting to kill him, says that the two women were prepared to dispose of his body after killing him. Mr. Stokes described how he was shot in the apartment of Miss Graham while on a friendly visit, and told of giving her money at various times. During the testimony the Graham woman wept bitterly.

YOUTH'S DREAM TRUE IN AGE.

Early Lovers Meet in Their Old Age and Get Married.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 29.—The dream of his boyhood days has come true and Jacob Henn, seventy-two years old, a retired farmer, has married Mrs. Katherine Hedderich, sixty-five years old, who was his sweetheart before the civil war.

The second romance began when, several months ago Henn was introduced by a friend to his sweetheart of the early fifties. Henn had twice before been married. His old sweetheart had been married many years ago to Jacob Hedderich, who died several years ago. Ever since Henn lost his second wife he had longed for the society of a mate in his declining years, but had abandoned hope of ever seeing his old sweetheart again, when he accidentally met her.

SURVIVES A SEVENTY-FOOT FALL.

Roseburg, Ore., Nov. 29.—Falling down the elevator shaft from the third story of the new Perkins building to the basement, a distance of about seventy feet, and escaping with a few slight bruises, was the unusual experience of Walter Baldwin, a laborer, here.

Baldwin was working near the elevator shaft and was about to signal the engineer to hoist the cage, when he suddenly lost his balance and plunged down the shaft. Persons who witnessed the accident rushed into the basement expecting to find the man dead.

A physician was summoned, and upon examination found that Baldwin sustained only a few bruises.

PAY HONOR TO THEIR BISHOP

Anniversary of Consecration as Bishop of Rt. Rev.

H. J. Alerding.

TRIBUTE BY PUPILS

In the fifty-four years of its history the diocese of Fort Wayne has had four bishops. They have been Rt. Rev. John Henry Luers, D. D., Rt. Rev. Joseph Dwenger, D. D., Rt. Rev. Joseph Rademacher, D. D., and the present bishop, Rt. Rev. Herman J. Alerding, D. D. The present prelate, Bishop Alerding, was consecrated to the high office on the 30th of November, 1900, the occasion being a notable one. The late Archbishop Elder, of Cincinnati, was the consecrator and Bishop O'Donoghue, of Louisville, and Archbishop Moeller, of Cincinnati, were the assistant bishops.

The event witnessed a great gathering of priests and prelates. The sermon on the occasion was preached by Rt. Rev. Joseph Chartrand, now conductor bishop of Indianapolis, but then the private secretary to the bishop there. Each year since Bishop Alerding has been honored by the clergy of his diocese and the laity on the anniversary of his consecration and this was the case this year, the two events of this character taking place Wednesday. One was the exercises held in the afternoon at the Central Catholic high school and the other in the evening at the St. Augustine's academy.

At the St. Augustine's academy in the evening the young ladies of the institution rendered a most interesting literary and musical program. The exercises were held in the parlors of the academy and present were the bishop, fourteen priests, six brothers of the Holy Cross, members of the faculty of the academy, and others.

The chorus, by the academic students opened the program, after which Moszkowski's Valse in A flat was rendered by the Misses Mac Centino, Helen Pauley, Helen Mommer and Ruth Kapp. The address of greeting to the bishop was read by Miss Grace Barva. This was followed by musical numbers as follows:

Vocal Trio—"Summer Fancies"..... Metra

Alice Burns, Martha Barva, Helen Clifford.
Intermezzo (violin).....Macbeth
Grace Barva, Pauline Dove.
Papers—"A Voice From the Middle Ages".....Class, of 1912
Sonata Pathétique.....Beethoven
Helen Clifford, Marie Sommers.
Chorus—"Father, Hear Our Prayer".....Mazuretti

Preceding the last chorus was the floral offering to Bishop Alerding, the presentation being by the little Misses Virginia Foohey, Hazel Quill and Helen Keating. The offering was a bouquet of chrysanthemums and roses and also a handsome hand-painted picture.

The Bishop's Address.

At the conclusion of the exercises the bishop in responding to the honors paid him, said in part:

"This is the eleventh time the students of St. Augustine's academy have assembled here for the observance of the anniversary of the consecration of the fourth bishop of the diocese of Fort Wayne. Eleven times! It is doubtful if any of you were here when the first anniversary celebration was held, but students come and go, as bishops come and go, and that is the way of all human things."

"Tonight that which is uppermost in our minds and which the holy church of God is so deeply interested in is Christian education. Students of 1911 can have no conception of what the conditions in the educational field were two generations ago. There has been tremendous progress and the system of education has developed in a most wonderful way. Consider if you will what has been accomplished in the diocese of Fort Wayne. You can begin in the grammar schools and finish in the university without leaving the diocese. Co-ordinated the different elements that go to make up the system, the grammar school, high school, college and university, each in its own place and each a part of the whole."

"I want to say to you," he continued, "you are receiving the best in the line of education right here. There is a lot of education that is inferior, but that which is yours has not a superior anywhere. No teachers are better than the good sisters under whom you are being trained; no students are making better use of the advantages that are theirs. Young ladies, you are exceptions to millions of others who have not the advantages that you have. A truly religious young lady growing up into perfect womanhood, the object of these institutions of learning presided over by the church is a source of encouragement to us all. Those assembled here tonight, the pastors, the brothers, the sisters, represent Christian education and we delight to see how this education is taking hold of our students and how they demonstrate by their work that the opportunities afforded them are appreciated."

"I am highly appreciative of the excellent program you have presented this evening and I take it as an expression of your respect for the office I hold. I thank Mr. Oechtering and the priests and brothers in attendance and I trust if it is our opportunity to live to a twelfth anniversary we shall all assemble here again."

The entertainment given by the scholars of the academy was a most enjoyable one in every respect. Every au-

CHOIR BOYS MINSTRELS.

Parish House of Episcopal Church
Crowded to Hear Performance.

More people than could find seats attended the performance of Trinity Episcopal church choir men and boys last evening to hear the annual minstrel performance. The entertainment was given in the parish house and was under the direction of Frederick G. Church, choir master, who was the musical director, and Samuel Geake, who had charge of the make-ups, stage directing and the entire olio part of the performance. Mr. Geake was also interlocutor and in the olio had the assistance of three young men not members of the choir. Their part of the performance was original as well as entertaining and the singing of the Melody quartet, of which Mr. Geake is a member, was another of the good features of the performance. The audience was greatly interested in the singing of the boys and friends were ready enough to give applause. But the boys rather outdid themselves and the chorus singing was really more than the size of the room needed to fill it. Solos were well sung by Robert Bourne, Eddie Kibiger, Ralph Cramer, Edgar Hamlett, Leslie Popp, Ewart Clear, Herbert Stephens and Charley Ashley and displayed many beautiful voices together with evidence of excellent training and careful preparation. The concert. Oscar Leggett gave a bone solo and Horace Jones impersonated and sang "Old Black Joe." The audience was enthusiastic during the entire program.

Narcotic Cartridge Invented.
Karl Burgsmüller of Krefeld, Germany, has devised a means for temporarily narcotizing animals—i. e., rendering them insensible. He fills a cartridge with a mixture composed of substances containing capsaicin in an immediately gasifiable form, and of an easily inflammable substance to accelerate the gasification. This is combined with a small quantity of an explosive agent between the mixture and an explosive cap with which the cartridge is provided. Possibly this is the explosive of the pistols sold for rendering burglars insensible.

Almost a car load of grain sacks have been received at this station of the Wabash railroad consigned to the farmers in this locality, to be used by them in which to ship the large crop of seed corn raised by them this season. Corn is grown here each season under a contract with the D. M. Ferry Seed Co., and others, and used by these firms to supply the trade with seed corn that is as good as can be grown, as it has been demonstrated that the soil in this section is highly adapted to raising a crop of this kind. Charles Graves is getting ready for his campaign in sale of Little Don seed corn, which is his specialty, and which he has been raising for several years on his farm west of town. This corn is of a high quality and he has been able to pull down prizes on same at the big corn shows over the country. Two years ago he got first at the Omaha corn show and last winter he scooped the platter at Columbus, Ohio, where he got the capital prize, a fine loving cup. He has not been able to fill his orders in seasons past, and this year has a fine crop that will be exhausted to fill the demand for a high grade corn for seed purposes.

Russel Banks, who is attending the Defiance college, came home to get his feet under the table and be in readiness when the "turk" was carved Thanksgiving day.

Mrs. Anthony King is quite ill at her home on Canal street. A relative from Paulding is caring for her.

SUFFRAGETTES MOBBED AT MEETING IN WALL STREET, NEW YORK

MRS. PANKHURST ADDRESSING THE CROWD.

SUFFRAGETTE MEETING AT BROAD AND WALL STREETS.

While attempting to rescue votes in the famous financial district of Wall street, New York, a delegation of leading suffragettes met with a decidedly warm reception. The Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw had a hard encounter with two men and Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch knocked the hats off several others. The suffragist band of six had gone to the Wall street district to express a protest to treatment accorded English suffragettes by the London authorities. They enlisted the assistance of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who departed soon after the street fight for Hartford. Before she took leave of her fellow workers in the cause she voiced her great astonishment at the unmannerly way the men acted. "We might have expected such a reception in England, but I did not look for it here," she said. The audience refused to listen to what any of the women had to say.

SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Nathan celebrated the fortieth anniversary of their wedding last evening by giving a dinner bridge at the Anthony hotel, where they have apartments. Covers at the banquet were laid for thirty. In receiving their guests Mr. and Mrs. Nathan were assisted by their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Simon J. Straus, and son Stanley Straus, of Ligonier, and by their son, Chester Nathan, of Fort Wayne. The table was laid for the entire company and was very beautifully decorated by the Flock Floral company in pink and white. Killarney roses and white hyacinths were used in profusion and were mingled with the fragrant sterna blossoms and with maiden-hair fern. Silver baskets of the flowers were the larger decorative pieces and clusters of vases of Italian ware held flowers and were placed in effective arrangement. At each place in addition to place cards were favors of dainty rose holders filled with bouquets. Mrs. Nathan's maiden name was Miss Carrie Wolf and her marriage to Mr. Nathan took place in Plymouth, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan received many congratulations and good wishes for the future. The bridge game was played in the reception room of the hotel. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. S. Straus and son, of Ligonier; Rabbi Abraham Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Max Frank, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Merz, Mr. and Mrs. Sol Rothschild, Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Straus, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Chaskin, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Frank, Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Freilinger, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lohman, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Becker, Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Seelberg and Abraham Ackerman. HAVE ELEVEN CHILDREN AND THREE GRANDCHILDREN.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand H. Borcherting, of 1103 Liberty Street.

One of the happy family gatherings of Thanksgiving day and one which is remarkable because of the number of participants is in progress at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand H. Borcherting, 1103 Liberty street. The day is also the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding day of the host and hostess, Mrs. Borcherting was Miss Minnie Townsend, and the ceremony which made her the wife of Mr. Borcherting was performed by Rev. Charles Gross at Emanuel's Lutheran church on Thanksgiving day, November 25, 1886. Their three grandchildren—Elsie, Betty, and a number of other relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Borcherting were born and reared in Lancaster, Germany. He came to America in 1879 and she came in 1883 and each came directly to Fort Wayne and has resided here ever since. Mr. Borcherting is a house painter and for the past five or six years has been employed at the Pennsylvania shops. He learned his trade at the Bass works and was employed there many years.

and Emma Nyboer, Jeanette and Virginia Loos, Lucile and Clementine Varmin, Marian Singleton, Euphemia DePrez, Marcelle Thyen and Loreta Wyss and Masters Dennis Lorraine Gerlock, Robert Loos, Wayne and Morris Garlick and Virgil Lorlier.

Gave Mothers' Party. Several women belonging to the Educational Union are interesting themselves in giving a series of Mothers' parties in different public school buildings and such a gathering was held yesterday afternoon at the Franklin school. The idea is to bring mothers and teachers into a closer relationship and thereby aid in the better and bigger development of the child. A social feature is introduced at each of these gatherings and talks yesterday were given by Mrs. S. Ackerman, Mrs. George Taylor and Anna Richley.

Marriage—Flickenger. Miss Mabel W. Flickenger and Mr. Cary E. Flickenger were united in marriage on Wednesday afternoon by Rev. J. K. Cecil, at the residence of the bride, 214 Nelson street. Mr. Flickenger is a fireman on the Pennsylvania railroad.

Lepper—Robinson. Rev. J. K. Cecil, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiated at the marriage of Miss Edith M. Robinson and Mr. Arthur C. Lepper on Wednesday morning. The young people were married at the residence and left immediately for a short wedding trip. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Lepper will be at home at 214 Nelson street. Mr. Lepper is a toolmaker.

HOW TO WASH FLANNEL BLOUSES. "No, I never wear flannel blouses," said a woman the other day. "It's impossible to wash them satisfactorily at home."

Master Virgil "Buster" Lorlier, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lorlier, celebrated his fourth birthday anniversary Saturday afternoon by entertaining a number of his friends at his home, 2812 South Hanna street, from 2 to 8 o'clock. The rooms were tastefully decorated with red crepe paper, and red candles and shades helped to make a pretty appearance. Mrs. Lorlier planned a fine supper for the children, covers being laid for fifteen. Little white toy sheep were given as favors. Games were played and Miss Euphemia Delux carried away the prizes. Music was also a feature, in which Virgil took the biggest part in singing, as he has a pretty voice and sings all the latest songs. The following guests were present: The Misses Anna and Emma Nyboer, Jeanette and Virginia Loos, Lucile and Clementine Varmin, Marian Singleton, Euphemia DePrez, Marcelle Thyen and Loreta Wyss and Masters Dennis Lorraine Gerlock, Robert Loos, Wayne and Morris Garlick and Virgil Lorlier.

When clean, rinse in clear warm water, wring and hang in a windy place to dry. Never dry flannel near a fire or in bright sunshine, or it is sure to shrink.

When nearly or quite dry, the blouses should be ironed on the wrong side with a rather cool iron till the flannel looks as smooth as when new. Some flannels look best if ironed when quite dry, others better if slightly damp, so the only plan is to experiment for oneself and find out which suits the particular kind that one favors.

Vests and other flannel garments can be satisfactorily washed in exactly the same way, and a rubber wringer, if it can be afforded, is a great comfort, as such things, after a run through this, are almost half dry.

BEGINS MOVING MONDAY. Fort Wayne Printing Company to Get Into New Location.

Manager John Wilding announced this morning that the Fort Wayne Printing company would begin Monday moving into its new location on Washington boulevard west, near Calhoun street. The new building, erected there by Fleher Brothers is now completed, and considerable new machinery for the printing concern is arriving. It will require about one month for the company to get nicely located in its new home.

THE RIGHT WAY TO MAKE TEA.

The American housewife might learn from her Japanese sister the most important secret of good tea making, which is none other than good tea. Enormous prices are paid for tea by the well-to-do women of the Flowery Kingdom. Too often the American woman selects this afternoon delicacy haphazard, of a quality and brand she scarcely knows.

Cheap tea is colored, because people will not buy the pale, rough leaves which are repulsive to the eye. Enormous prices are paid for tea by the well-to-do women of the Flowery Kingdom. Too often the American woman selects this afternoon delicacy haphazard, of a quality and brand she scarcely knows.

Straining is the important point. If allowed to stand on the grounds the poisonous tannin collects, and this is where the harm in the beverage rests. Strain the tea from the bowl into the teapot or cups, and it will be delicate of flavor and deliciously fragrant.

Real tea drinkers do not modify the aroma of their cups with cream, though they may indulge in a lump of sugar. A slice of lemon in the bottom of the cup, or a clove, leaves a faint trace of its pungency, agreeable to many.

Health and Beauty Hints.

BY MRS. MAE MARTIN.

Mauda S.: A "made" complexion never looks real, and if you continue using cosmetics the skin will grow rough and unattractive. Try sprumax lotion and I'm sure you will be delighted with results. Store two teaspoonfuls glycerine in one-half pint hot water, then add four drops of sprumax. When cool apply sparingly to face, neck and arms and rub lightly until it dries. The sprumax lotion is soothing and cleanses the skin of all impurities and banishes the oily, sallow look. Use this lotion and you will have a complexion rivaling any made by artificial means.

Mrs. Geo.: It is dangerous to disregard the laws of nature, and unless you employ a system-thing you may have a run of sickness. I would suggest making up the following old-time blood-cleanser and taking a tablespoonful three times daily: In a half pint alcohol dissolve one-half cupful sugar, then add one ounce karoene and hot water to make a quart. This tonic will expel impurities from the body, repair waste tissues and restore lost appetite, as well as give you renewed strength and vigor.

M. O.: The only quick and sure way to remove fuzz from the cheek is to apply a delatone paste. Let it remain two or three minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. Only in rare instances is it necessary to use the second application. Delatone costs a dollar for an original ounce package, but it is worth it to rid the skin of superfluous hair.

Mrs. O.: Glasses at your age, I presume, are quite necessary. However, if you get an ounce of crystals and dissolve it in a pint of cold water and put two or three drops in each eye every day, you can overcome the soreness and redness. Keep up this simple treatment and before long your eyes will take on a youthful sparkle and brilliancy and you will no longer be troubled with weak eyes.

Hope: Don't wreck your nervous system by doing, because by taking ordinary hypnotics, found in all drug stores, you can reduce your weight to where you want it and not suffer any inconvenience.

Anxious: Baldness among women is nothing short of a calamity, and really suggests carelessness or indifference in care of the hair. You can restore the natural color and silkiness to your hair and make it grow thick and beautiful, if you make and use this simple tonic: Into a half-pint alcohol pour a half-pint water, then add one ounce quinine. Frequently massaging a little of this into the scalp overcomes dandruff and thinness, and so invigorates the hair-follicles that an abundance of fine glossy hair results.

APOTHEOSIS OF THE THANKSGIVING GOBBLER

The Splendid Diner Out Dilates Upon the Spirit of the Holiday and the Delight of a Turkey Feast at Aunt Belinda's

BY GARNET WARREN.

(Copyright, 1911, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)
It has always seemed to me that the institution of Thanksgiving justified the existence of our Puritan ancestry, which, of course, we possess. It provided the opportunity for legitimate gluttony on at least one occasion in the year. It provided an incentive to marriage by providing an incentive for decent gastronomic skill. Any woman suffragist will tell you that. Otherwise we must have frowned upon the Puritans, if only on account of the claims of their descendants, to whom the Mayflower might be sometimes a sort of cerebral disease.

The Puritans, however, were solid in the matter of Thanksgiving, though the way was made easy for them, so to speak. They lived, for one reason, before the days of hat and cloak pirates of the restaurants, whose existence must have made the introduction of Thanksgiving impossible. Then there is the absence of the subway atmosphere to consider and a Puritanical inexperience of the possibilities to which baseball ticket distribution may attain.

So Thanksgiving Day became possible, and our continuance of its processes merely proves that as a nation we possess a sense of humor. If you possess anything else please permit the ticket speculators to hear about it and watch it disappear. To be "taken care of" is the privilege of every loyal fan. But we were speaking of Thanksgiving.

When Jacob sold his birthright for a mess of pottage he was rightly entitled to an occasion for thanksgiving. He received the pottage. Since that time there have been many Jacobs, on whose behalf, however, one point of sympathy may yet be urged. No one among them ever approached Thanksgiving without a glow, whatever he may have done afterward as a result of unskilled artistry at the range. No one ever regarded untouched the moving possibilities of turkey in his proper condition of tenderness and succulence, of cranberry sauce in exactly its appropriate state of glowing insinuating appeal, of sweet potatoes done, as if by very fairies' touch, at the exact, the meticulous, the psychologic moment.

Even a condition of slavery may not dull the delicate perception of such delights, which should be the heritage of angels as of slaves. If you smile at such appreciations you have obviously been cheated of some of the more insidious felicities, of which even existence may not deprive. You clearly have neglected to be introduced to Aunt Belinda's and may therefore regard even purgatory with complacency. Your course in life has been thorny and your reflections may well be cynical. You have lived without a crisp comfort, an exhilarant inspiration (which it is almost demeaning to term sauce), and a suave and velvet joy, which you may call sweet potatoes, and be content, if you have the soul of a green caterpillar.

Otherwise you will do nothing of the kind, but will read with fitting reverence the manner in which these things may be prepared, that in some golden day you may forestall paradise by partaking of them. If you encompass this by way of the kitchen range, don't worry. Any paradise at a pinch.

But the setting must come first. The turkey, being greater, shall be reserved. The turkey will keep, or should do so in November, if his name doesn't happen. Storage, which Providence forbid.

Aunt Belinda's Haven.

See then the place in which Aunt Belinda, who, cooked mine, lived unconscious—as ever are the greater poets—of a halo. Blandish's Corners I name it—that the inhabitants may not unduly be obsessed with pride. And you may call it a good twelve miles from a railroad. Bud Perkins' general store is at the foreground, with the post office at its entrance, "a cans," "a brooms," "a hardware," "a long boots," "a farm tools in the dim recesses," "a smell of karrishine all about. Across the road and opposite back is Jenkin Long's farmhouse, pinked in the ostentation of full weatherboard. It's the biggest place 'bout here.

A little further up is Cy Gannett's gin—a shed with lanky legs, dedicated to the severe virtue of pickin' cotton. Down at a peep of a road is a little log shanty with a chimney of lath and plaster and a gelatinous dark person within, chuckling with the matchless unction of her race. Perhaps she, too, is to have turkey. Pine trees are all about; set thick upon lonely hills, and here and there is a little clearing; "a Bud Perkins is settin' on his piazza floor whittlin' in white shirt sleeves and dark best clothes (the stripe through 'em carefully selected, if you'll believe me), and Bill Geesh, with his full dark suit and his lean face, is next to him, whittlin' too; 'a Ben Naggett in long boots and a black string tie is a-settin' there—whit-tin' also—in chewin', 'a ain't very exact at a cigarette box three defenceless yards away, 'a coverin' it with yaller too—every time. And the three expectantly observe the roads, for there are great doings on the way. It is Thanksgiving Day and eight o'clock and—side of that humbler brother who is only to be raffled for. An admiring circle forms about them patterning their way with dexterous ejections—colored yellor. It is a company among which is observable a predisposition for darkish clothes and soft, black hats of an insistent brim and a uniformly discernible skill in the matter of ejection. The subject of talk, of course, is obvious, and swells, ruffling, along with small triumphant blasts, an illustration of the futility of fame. Every pound of him is eyed anticipatorily.

"I only see but one turkey that beat that thar feller behind," said Ben Naggett, presently, in a pause employed by him partly in the further preparation of fluid for the purpose of marksmanship. The rest looked up as Ben nodded an anecdotal bead toward the rear. He had alluded to a familiar topic. For weeks the turkey in the rear had been discussed in intervals of salutatory activities. He was known with a not un-anticipative affection to the district.

And if the finer notes of poetic appreciation are not drawn forth it is the fault of the poetry—not of the appreciation. Satirical remarks, however, are in order upon the subjects of wishbones—insidious properties enough, believe me. In the meantime the store has man, but an unpoetic one and to whom none of subtler secrets of cookery were known. He was of a kind that snatched his lips at mere size, as if that mattered if but a bird were plump and possessed of the inner unctious which may be taken by those select among presiding divinities of the range and translated into full content. He never knew the scrupulous niceties of cleansing or the subtler intuitions in the matter of the precise heat of a stove. Let him stay in outer darkness and let us turn our eyes upon Belinda, a fairer figure, albeit one whose color was rigidly emphasized at birth. She was very black and shining, and smiling, for all she possessed such delicate divinations in the more secret charms of food.

How may one know from its envelope what the soul may be? How might one guess the refinements which lay within the quivering vastnesses of Belinda's form? She was a rare spirit, unconscious of the raptures in which she moved. With what solemnity she chose her implement of sacrifice (call it knife if you have an instinct for being utterly out of tone); with what care she wielded it, spilling its incidental life like an inviolable goddess, that its form gird them as you love me. Cook books, too, may have the feet of clay. There is the question of the stove.

That is, of course, if you must use a stove. Personally I prefer a spit, like the good French. A spit keeps your bird eternally moist, as it turns round 'n round—like some entrancing game of childhood—before the hearty coals. That bird doesn't puddle in some liquid which never can improve a bird. Given your oven, madam, if you must—be prudent, and keep it at first conservatively slow, that again the very precious juices should be kept. Be tardy initially, and so secure, as is the way of nature, for a quick cooked bird is apt to make cynics—it is so demultion dry. Increase your heat at your half distance, so to speak. This will make for your final crispness, and your succulence as well. It will also aid digestion; though, of course, you don't mind that. You prefer tablets, I know.

A Sense of Perfection.

We will come back to Belinda with a sense of the true perfection to which turkey may attain. She moves collectively like some enshrined goddess in the heaven of her predilections. The fair, white body of her unexceptionable turkey lies before her—symbol of fragile hopes and fears to thousands of perfectly virtuous housewives who so affectionately bestow indulgence upon their husbands. They, however, are not adept like Belinda, who, beneath her billowing vastness, seems to possess a sort of rhythm possessed by the greater painters and fashioners of words. Observe her as she takes her giblets (descended name), scrupulously bestowed by her in her convenient saucer, and chops them minutely with the care that one imagines Richard le Gallienne lavishes upon his much prized stanzas.

In the meantime the chestnuts are boiling—have been boiling for perhaps three hours, for Belinda takes the large, fat French ones, poignant (one might say) with meat and of more insidious gifts of subtle flavor than those we gather here. She meticulously raves from them their shell, and then the inner jacket. White, naked, joyful little bodies! Gentle, innocent objects! A potato masher would seem to desecrate you! But so it must be if you are to be metamorphosed into stuffing. Belinda, if any one, however, may do so. Her washing seeps a kind of gracious rite, set upon a canopy of billows. So proceeding, she measures scrupulously half a pint of cream, beats the golden yolks of two eggs, mixes 'em together, mixes butter, pepper, salt and the most particularly exact quantity of thyme, and forms a precious cargo of the whole—cream, eggs, butter, pepper, salt and thyme together. What subtle distillation might be calculated to be more gratifying to chestnuts, mashed though they be? Nothing that I could think of, till Belinda had a happy thought. Chopped (very delicately chopped) sausage! In an instant it was added to the giblets, which were graciously, delicately chopped, too. The result, of course, very measurably approached poetry of a high order.

If you can imagine sausage and giblets (in such tiny choppings), 'a chestnut, 'n cream, 'n all the rest, lulled to so amiable a paste, you will understand me. If you can't, please take me for granted. You're a palate, at all events.

But the turkey, not unnaturally, gaped. Who would not, even if one's gizzard was slit, for such a gallant freightage? Now Belinda tied the neck with string—excusably, I thought. What preparing turkey would desire to waste so potent a charge as such stuffing, filled as that bird should be to the very brim? Now for the thread to sew it in. It may be removed (and the string, too) when the bird appears to minister to your exultant palates. Then dredge him with flour—give him royal rites—and insinuate him into the oven. Four over him water and sweet butter like some baptismal oil at first. Lay like some sweet sacrifice a dab of sweetest butter in the corner of his pan. Pour every little while his gravy about him; he likes it. It will keep him moist. Then watch him and pray for him and salt him half an hour before his time to come forth triumphant.

You will dry him if you salt him at first. Cook him so, according to the ritual, half an hour to warm and ten minutes for each pound of him. And one thing more—Leave him unbasted, I pray you, for his final twenty minutes, that his skin may dry and become crisp, 'n crummy, 'n crackly, and may give to you many of the felicities which you know you do not deserve. Then say grace—afterward that you may be truly thankful.

What is that I hear you whisper, madam? A turkey doesn't make a dinner? There are other dishes? Certainly. What are the cook books for?

might be turned to nobler things! With what care she plucked—

And here I wish to speak a word about plucking any decent, self-respecting bird, though you must concede the credit to Belinda, who, in her rare way, made it known. She received her knowledge from some fortuitous visit to France, where she absorbed the secrets of its people—God's chosen gourmets upon earth. So, transcendently, it came to me. Refrain, then, I implore you, from scalding any bird in the processes of your plucking, if you have any regard for me and the enjoyment of your dinner afterward. That it is your American habit I know, but this shall not pardon you. We are now upon no mere matter of constructing skyscrapers or navies, or that in which quick time should count for anything. Scalding water is speedy, but horrible. It is reminiscent of the processes of some ravenous trencherman who may be effective, but who is obviously discomforting.

Desecration of a Shrine.

Scalding water robs the ineffable outer skin, which is greatly the delight of turkey or fowl, of the most delicate juices, of its supremest joy. It takes from it its capacity for rich crispness, insinuating, permeating fullness of flavor—its steeps of fair delight—which the true uncontaminated skin of your royal turkey should yield. It makes of you a desecrator at an essential shrine. Would you spill hot water on some conscious omelette upon a score of time? Why, then, dull with contaminating ways a royalist of birds? No, no: touch him so tenderly, pluck him with care, without hot water, my mistress, and against the fall of feathers, that undisturbed may be the virgin tenderness of fair, plump skin.

Never, either, flush with water his exquisite insides, where some of his fullest steeps of flavor are. Never permit your desires for sanitation to sweep from you the last fair fragments of Arcadian things that the gods still allow to exist upon this world. Wipe him with a cloth, and so clean him when you have punctiliously bestowed his proper vitals in some regarded place. In this way the very juices of his soul are gladly given to you. Would you spill scalding water upon the bloom of some radiant, unsuspecting rose? If the cook books order you to do it, disre-been revisited and Ben Naggett has invited the company "pickin' daisies"—the form of invitation in Blandish's Crossing, which is prohibition and possesses no drug stores. They hide it in trees at Blandish's.

In the exhilaration of return the raffle is precipitated, the shooting, too, in a clearing in which a target is set upon a tree. Bud Peters wins, and Joel Davis. The rigs are untethered from trees by the crossing. There are dubious congratulations by losers, who obviously must kill their own birds. The topic of conversation is sacrificed before an admiring circle and hung swathed in some unworthy sack from Bud's rig. The preliminaries are done.

Introducing Aunt Belinda.

The time is come to introduce Belinda. Would that she had won the turkey, or that that great gift might have been bestowed upon Jenkin Long, her master! In the case of Ben Naggett, I know that those sacred juices were unappreciated. A worthy

His size was dwelt upon; his weight was learnedly appraised. He was referred to familiarly in a manner that suggested a spirit pot unct. shed, and who will not admit that evidences of such regard were merited? He was no mere object of food, this one; he possessed all the potentiality of a Major Dick. Songs might not unworthily have been sung to him as they have been sung in honor of other Ultimates. His gobblers were red as poppies or red wine, his yellow legs were tender as should be those of any turkeys marked for the adoration of a district. Under his delicious feet were skin unsullied and uncasked by use. Tender was his breast bone as that of a virgin dried in the velvet dusks of wood, by which allusion you may see that poetry may well be written about turkeys.

Behind the store he swelled unconscious—unimaginative bird—of his place. Little he knew that he was the prize of the shoot-off at Blandish's! Beside him ruffled another fellow, but he was a star of lesser magnitude—a mere subject for raffle like you and I. We, alas! are no prizes of the shooting, either.

But it is nine now of a crisp, shrewd morning. Along the roads slowly creep rigs of the old fashioned sort—four wheeled and no nonsense in the matter of rubber tires. Howdy, Bud! Why, howdy, Ben—how is he? Proud in all unconsciousness of his approaching apotheosis, the turkey swells in the yard by the

WHY THE LEAVES TURN.

At the fall of the year every one admires the vast beauty of the variegated colors of the leaves which Jack Frost has spent night after night in painting. But what causes the foliage at this time of year to change from green to such magnificent colors?

The common idea is that frost causes the brilliant colors of the leaves. This popular fallacy is without foundation in fact, for frost has nothing whatever to do with the delicate tinting of the leaves; it does, however, hasten their fall. You have only to go out in the swamps and woodland a month before frost to find a young maple in all of its fall glory, or a sumack bush blazing forth its fiery leaves, to explode the theory that frost changes the leaves.

Autumn coloring is actually due to oxidation, which is caused by the action of light and heat, somewhat similar to the rust on iron or steel. With leaves it is due to the fact that in fulfilling their mission they become choked by their own excretions, and the acids thus formed are acted on by the oxygen. It is a peculiar fact that young trees are the first to turn red in autumn.

In extremely moist atmospheres the colors of the leaves are not usually very bright, as in England. And in very dry climates the leaves dry up suddenly, and their skin, which is very thick to prevent the escape of moisture, is not sufficiently transparent to allow the color to be seen beneath. In regions where the autumn foliage is most vivid we find that an average season produces the most exquisite colors. Neither a very dry nor a very wet summer will result in much brilliant color.

The extraordinary range of coloring in the autumn leaves of a single species is very noticeable, particularly so with the sugar maple; and it is a remarkable fact that individual trees will continue the same colors for year after year, and not only that, but the same branch will show the first tinge of color each season. But frost does not do this, it is the physical makeup of the tree that causes the leaves to shine in iridescent beauty during the autumn months.

The Worldly Wisdom of Mr. Bumpkin.

BY W. J. LAMPTON

J. HAYSEDE BUMPKIN, of Jerseyhurst-on-the-Passauque, was a profoundly wise and penetrating person. He had never bought a gold brick in his life and a lightning rod agent feared J. H. more than he feared the thunderbolts of Jove working on an alternating current. Occasionally he sharpened his wits on the grind of the metropolis, but not often. His business kept him at home, and, besides, he didn't want to be too keen for daily use. He read the newspapers, and when a man reads the newspapers what is left for him to know is almighty few and far between. Mr. Bumpkin didn't look his name, but that indefinable something which differentiates the urban and the rural was present to the educated sense, and if Mr. B. had got into a Manhattan taxicab and merely said "Home!" the driver would instinctively have headed for a North River ferry.

Be this as it may, one morning he was at the Jerseyhurst-o-t-P station to take the first train into the city and he gave a very fair impersonation of one of those veterans of short distance travel known as "commuters." At first he appeared so to a stranger, but a few of his fellow townsmen who were roosting on a truck till the train came suggested that he had better "look out" in the city or he would come back home "plumb skinned alive."

Another friend suggested that he "had oughter" swim the river so the green would be faded on him "quite some" when he reached the New York shore, but J. H. laughed at these pleasanties and boarded a train. All the way in he studied his newspaper, making a specialty of local items involving police activities, and when the conductor announced "All out!" he felt revived and reinforced for any emergency. He was inconspicuous in the crowd that crossed the river and he did not have to ask his way when he landed under the shadow of the skyscrapers. He knew what he was there for, and he went straight to it.

Nothing serious happened to him so long as he remained down town attending to the business that brought him to the city. Indeed, nothing serious could have happened, for he was in the hands of business friends, who slapped him on the back, told him stories, lunched him and separated him from his money in a legitimate manner at thirty days for value received. When he left them he was feeling like a metropolite, and at three o'clock he was alone in the Tenderloin neighborhood with three hours at his disposal in which to get a taste of the real life of the city and simply "honing" for somebody to try to mow the grass on him. After an aimless wander of half an hour he stopped in front of a clothing store window to gather a few hials on the latest kibosh in men's attire, for Mr. B. was a good dresser, and a nice looking gentleman lined up alongside of him.

"Why, how do you do, Mr. Johnson?" said the gentleman quite spontaneously, as he put out a glad hand to him. "How are all the good people of Alloway?"

At first Mr. B. was thrown off his guard, but in a minute he remembered what he was out to find, and he braced himself for the fray. He was "on" bigger than a load of hay.

"My name isn't Johnson," he responded with a guileless smile of confidence, taking the gentleman's proffered hand, "and I don't come from Alloway. My name's Thompson and I'm from Notchville." And he chuckled deep down to himself at the thought of a bunco guy trying to put it over an old one like him.

"Oh, I beg your pardon!" cried the gentleman in much confusion, dropping Mr. B.'s hand and hurrying away.

"Now for his pal," soliloquized Mr. B., as he moved off in the opposite direction, chuckling all over. "I wish to thunder them dubs over home could see me now," he thought, as he rubber-necked along, waiting for his prey. Nobody on earth but a wise Reuben under similar circumstances can appreciate Mr. B.'s sense of power and sensation of delight at this moment.

Presently another elegant gentleman accosted him. This time it was not so spontaneous as on the previous occasion, for the gentleman stood at the corner and looked at him two or three times as though he must surely know him. Finally he conquered his doubt and approached.

"Isn't this Mr. Thompson, of Notchville?" he inquired in a diffident, hesitating manner, notwithstanding he was springing on him the same old gag.

"No, sir," replied Mr. B., frowning darkly, but keeping back of the shadow a radiance of joy at the beautiful way in which he was passing it out to the busy bunks of the great city.

"Of course you're not," haw-bawed the gentleman, changing his manner into such sudden and friendly familiarity that Mr. B. was thrown out of gear. "Of course, you're not. I was just jollifying you, don't you know! Merely giving you an imitation of a confidence man reaching for a Reuben. But you are too keen for that sort of racket, you are. I told my friend you couldn't be worked, and there was no use trying. But he insisted, and you put it onto us, all right, all right, didn't you? I don't know who you are, but you are a good fellow, just the same, and I'd like to buy you a drink. Let's slip around the corner to a quiet place, out of the noise. Come on; you're the first man in ten years that hasn't fallen for my genial welcome to our city."

The gentleman, haw-hawing some more, grasped Mr. B. by the arm in the urgency of his hospitable intent, and Mr. B. accepted the invitation, chuckling so intensely at the easy thing he had got up against, that he was afraid he would give the whole thing away before the close of the session.

"By cripes!" he said to himself as they sat down to a table in a cosy corner. "I've not only beat 'em at their own game, but they admit it and throw the drinks in free. I wonder what them Jersey jays would say if they saw me now."

Some hours later, when the kindly cop picked Mr. B. up suffering from knock-out-dropey, the victim didn't know whether he lived in Jersey or Jerusalem, and didn't have money or personal effects enough in his clothes to have bought a postal to write home to the folks to send him the price of a ticket to Jerseyhurst. And Mr. B. read all about it in the papers next day, just as he had read many times of similar cases.

So did everybody else in Jerseyhurst-o-t-P.

THE SACRED GOOSE.

It was Frazer, of the Golden Bough, who suggested that the reverence felt for various creatures in all parts of the world is a survival of totemism. Since that time plenty of evidence has accumulated. Caesar mentions, as almost any schoolboy will recall, that the inhabitants of Britain might not eat of the hare, the cock and the goose. In the second case the superstition is quite lost probably, but legendary records keep the memory of it in Ireland.

Of other examples, however, enough can be found even at the present day. At a place in Lancashire, England, there is held at times a "goose fair," so called apparently because goose is rigorously forbidden. It is even asserted that the inhabitants think the goose too sacred to eat—or did so not so long ago.

This same feeling about the goose ruled in the Hebrews and other parts of Scotland. Wherever Buddhism rules the goose is venerated, therefore it is a leading motif in the art of Japan and a symbol of peace and happiness in China. Figures of geese are as indispensable at a Chinese wedding as is wedding cake with us. In both countries, as also in Burma and Siam, weights are made in the shape of a goose in token of good faith, though the connection is not obvious. But in ancient Egypt the same custom ruled, such weights being found among the first discoveries at Nineveh. A row of gigantic geese surrounds the great Buddhist temple of Anajapora. The devout cherish a fond fancy that all geese perform an aerial pilgrimage to the holiest of lakes in the Himalayas every year, transporting the sins of the neighborhood, returning with a new stock of inspiration for the encouragement of local piety.

Few believe at the present day that the Roman capital was saved by the quack of a goose, but if the story is not true it becomes all the more significant in the folklorist's point of view as showing that the fowl was specially revered in the primitive age of Rome. The Crusaders under Walter the Penniless, some 400,000 souls, so it is claimed, pliously followed a goose and a goat marching in the van—and what a mess those holy animals led them into! In Egypt the goose was the emblem of Seb, father to Osiris. A precious figure of it is extant inscribed, "The Good Goose Greatly Beloved."

Hustle the Home Builders
for the First But Lose
Out on Series.

HIDES TAKE THREE

In the opening game of the series at St. Mary's alleys the Recruits made the Home Builders jump all the way through and were only beaten by a few pins. The showing was not as good in the second, but in the third the luck was with them and they won by twenty-two pins.

For the Builders Tony Haas amassed 213 in his second game and it gave him the best marks, although Brink ran him in close second for the best average.

JOE BIRMINGHAM HAS WALSH'S GOAT

Joe Birmingham, the strong-armed utility man of the Cleveland Naps, is the "hoodoo" batter for Ed Walsh, according to the following story told by Henry Edwards, the sporting editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"On Oct. 2, 1908, the most memorable game of base ball ever played in Cleveland, and one of the most remarkable ever staged on any diamond, was contested by the Naps and White Sox. Both teams were struggling for the championship with the end of the campaign but a few days distant. Both teams sent their best pitchers to the slab, Addie Joss working for Cleveland, Ed Walsh for Chicago.

"That was the day that Joss did not allow a single one of the White Sox to reach first base; that was the day that Walsh failed 15 of the Naps in eight innings; that was the day that Cleveland won 1 to 0.

"And it so happened that Joe Birmingham made two of Cleveland's four hits and scored the only run of that wonderful battle on the diamond. Defeat after pitching such remarkable ball was a bitter pill for Walsh to swallow, and it was many a day before he looked back upon that day without entertaining a grudge against the man who scored that lonely tally.

"And from that day to this, Joe Birmingham has had Ed Walsh's goat. The hardest team in the American league for Walsh to defeat is Cleveland, and just because Joe Birmingham is a member of it. In fact, ever since that memorable day, Oct. 2, 1908, Joe has hated Walsh's elusive pitchers with avidity.

"They are the best of friends upon the diamond and off, but nevertheless, the White Sox pitcher has hurled many a remark at the Nap outfielder to indicate that he was peeved when Joe came along with a timely hit.

"That Walsh admits that Birmingham is the hardest man in the league for him to fool is the statement made to the writer by Pitcher George Mullin, of Detroit, during the last world's series. Walsh having informed Mullin to that effect. At any rate Birmingham was largely responsible for five defeats sustained by Walsh at the hands of the Naps during the season of 1911."

KNITS DROP GAME

In the Fort Wayne Bowling association games the Heidelberg, which have been in a slump for several weeks, had a return of luck and won two in three games from the White Fruit House five, although the latter got more pins for their efforts.

Unluckily for the Fruit House bowlers they bunched their pins in the second game and got the high total of the evening but they lost the first game by seven pins and the third by thirteen. Brooks got off with 202 and his score was high, but Taleme and Tucker both beat him for average, the high mark going to the former.

Holmes led off for the losers and was the star bowler for his club, closing with 202, which tied Miller's mark in the second game. The scores:

HARD BATTLE AT BRUNSWICK.

Coal Heavers Get More Pins Than Packers, But Lose the Series.

There was a tight battle at the Brunswick alleys in the first league games in which the City Coal Supply team got 34 pins more than the Fred Eckart Packing company's club, but lost the series two to one. There was a dispute on a foul in the third game that may bring about a protest.

When it is shown that the low average for the coal men was 130 for three games it shows that the bowling was fast all the way through. Beckes was high with 152. John Kelly led the losing club with 129-2-5 for his efforts. High individual scores went to Sander and Kelly. The scores:

"You can never tell what a football player will do," said Mike Murphy, the great Penn. trainer. The other afternoon, I had a fellow up at Yale named Vanderpool. He played on the scrub and he was just a little shy of making the varsity. I knew that he had the stuff, but Tom Shevlin and Frank Hickey thought otherwise, and they got him on the second team.

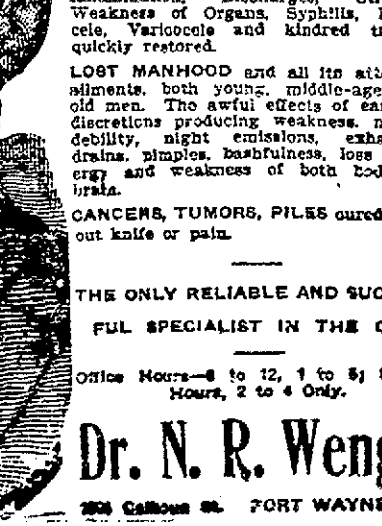

"That year Harvard had a fellow named Cutts, who chewed the Yale line into ribbons. They beat us 22 to 0, securing all their points in the first half. In the second half, when the regular halfback had been pounded to death, I just took things into my own hands and put this fellow into the game.

"I talk about a revolution, why this fellow just turned that fellow Cutts over on his back as though he had been hit with a cannon ball. He threw himself into that tandem play like a mad bull.

"I was in New York one night, and a fellow showed me on the street and stuck this pin into my tie. He took it out of his own tie. It was Vanderpool, the fellow I had faith in, and who played a great game for Yale when the rest of the fellows bowed before superior force. I have never seen him since, but I will wear that pin to my grave."

FRIARS IN CLASH WITH CORBY HALL AT PARK TODAY FANS WANT JENNINGS FOR NEW YORK

Klaehn, Scully, Ball, Gessler, Park, Pierre, Loeffler, Strieder, Short.

Although the weather man didn't simply just the Friars would have chosen if the choice had been left to them sunshine and a stiff breeze are not considered bad for football and indications were that the fans of Fort Wayne had made up their minds to stand a few discomforts just to see the first college team that has been placed on exhibition here.

Corby Hall, with a band of rosters, was due at noon, and arrangements had been made to entertain the players at the Anthony hotel and they will be the guests of the Friars and the old Notre Dame students at a banquet this evening at 6 o'clock.

The Friars think the club is in better shape than it has been at any time since its organization. Last night's practice put the men on edge and they were prepared when they went down to the lot to put on a few tricks that the patrons here have never seen.

Adolph Schütz is wonderfully interested in the team and he feels sure that the plays he has learned in his connection with the big college clubs will avail the Friars much against Corby Hall. The ground on the side lines is covered with straw and everything has been done that will insure the comfort of the patrons of the game.

PACKKEY A FAVORITE

San Francisco, Nov. 30.—Packey McFarland and "Harlem Tommy" Murphy are well under weight and in good condition for the 20-round fight for today.

With the elimination of the Wolgast-Welsh bout, owing to the champion's illness, the McFarland-Murphy contest forced itself into unexpected prominence. McFarland ruled a 10 to 1 favorite over the New York boxer. McFarland expressed deep regret when apprised of Ad Wolgast's misfortune yesterday at Los Angeles, where he was operated on for appendicitis. McFarland's ambition has been to meet Wolgast in a fight that would decide the championship.

Local sporting authorities ventured the assertion that Wolgast cannot come back. They figure he will not be able to enter the ring for twelve months at least, and then despite his stamina and ability to assimilate punishment—the pugilistic prognosticators figure that he will not be the Wolgast of old. Therefore the winner of today's contest is looked upon by many as the logical successor.

"Harlem Tommy" Murphy, reckoned as one of the hardest light weights in the business to beat, declared shortly before entering the ring that he expected to win within fifteen rounds. McFarland, full of confidence, maintained that he would dispose of the New Yorker in easy fashion.

CEMENT BIG INDUSTRY

GIANT STRIDES MADE IN BUSINESS IN TEN YEARS.

In Capital Employed It Far Outranks the Gold Mining Industry of United States.

Ten years ago the production of Portland cement for the first time passed the 10,000,000-barrel mark showing an increase of 2,600 per cent over the production of ten years previous, and the giant strides that had been made in the industry were widely remarked. Even this production was small compared with that of the present day. In 1910, according to the report on cement by Ernest F. Burchard of the United States geological survey, the production of Portland cement reached the enormous total of 76,549,851 barrels, with a value of $68,205,800.

This is equivalent to 12,366,152 long tons, valued at $5.25 a ton. It is an increase over the output for 1909 of 11,558,520 barrels, or nearly 18 per cent, and an increase in value of $15,347,446, or more than 29 per cent. This increase alone is greater than the total output of Portland cement in 1900.

In addition to Portland cement there was also produced last year 1,129,239 barrels of natural cement and 35,951 barrels of puzzolan cement, a total of 77,785,141 barrels.

The price of Portland cement in 1910 was as low as 73 cents a barrel in some places, the average for the United States being 89.1 cents a barrel. In 1890 the average price was over $2 a barrel, and as late as 1903 it was $1.24 a barrel.

Mr. Burchard remarks that measured by the capital invested the cement industry is one of the world's three great extractive industries. In capital employed it apparently far outranks the gold mining industry of the United States, including Alaska, as well as the copper industry. Only coal and iron stand ahead of it.

The principal constituent of Portland cement is limestone, and Mr. Burchard's report summarizes the most important limestone formations in all the states. The greatest of these are found in the eastern half of the United States, where there are enormous limestone deposits.

That the manufacturer of cement is an American industry is shown by the fact that while our production last year was over 75,000,000 barrels, our imports were only 306,863 barrels. Our exports were 2,476,957 barrels.

PROVE LAZINESS A DISEASE
Investigations Have Shown That the Victim Really Is More to Be Pitied Than Blamed.

Laziness is really a disease. Men actually are born lazy and, being so born, are not able to perform great mental or physical work. Theophile Ribot of the Institute de France says in the Revue Philosophique: "Moralists have written about the vice of laziness, but they neglect to consider the basic causes of such a quality or defect and attribute it simply to a lack of will power. Congenital laziness, born laziness that is, has an organic and a mental origin. A scientifically complete examination of a series of so-called idlers has discovered there was a lack of tonicity in the whole system, that the heart beats were weak, the arterial pressure was low, and that the circulation was generally of the slackest. A consequence of this is that the brain showed not so much an indolence as a real incapacity for concentrating attention, and soon, owing to the fact that its nourishment was at the vanishing point, became exhausted. The truth of these findings is pointed, moreover, by the fact that even persons of great mental and physical energy are given to indulgence in spells of idleness which they themselves are unable to explain, since their inclination does not tend toward waste of time. At such periods they will find that the circulation of the blood had dropped from normal activity or else that, owing to indigestion or sluggish liver, certain areas of the brain and body are not being supplied with the normal quantity of blood."

Martyr to the Roentgen Rays.

Dr. Hall-Edwards of the Birmingham university, according to the English Mechanic and World of Science, has not been spared the payment of a heavy price for the benefits he has conferred on mankind by his researches in X-ray photography. A short time ago both his arms were amputated as a consequence of the dangerous experiments he had carried out. He has just made the novel suggestion that photography should be included in the ordinary university course of training. The connection between photography and art, he thinks, has been over-rated. Nothing has helped science more than photography of late years, and it should, therefore, receive more attention than it does at present in the education given both in schools and in the universities.

Auto-Plow for Army Work.

Germany has introduced an auto-plow for digging trenches during actual engagement, and it promises to play an important part hereafter in army circles. The new machine can do the work three times as speedily as men, besides saving immeasurable energy to an army. It requires but one operator and travels at about six miles an hour when going at top speed.

Precious Health for Men.

If a valuable secret of health was revealed to some men would they profit by it? Thousands fruitlessly pursue pleasure, because their recuperative powers and endurance are not in the same condition as in youth. There comes a time in every man's life when help is required if he would enjoy life's greatest functions keenly and feel the rich, red blood surging through his being and radiating his power and vitality through the flash and fire in his eye, the smile of confidence and strength in his face and the vigor and vitality in his manly walk and carriage. The help required in the vast majority of cases may be said to consist of an artificial aid to nature in the form of medical treatment for the specific purposes of transforming, through the vital organs, such as the stomach, liver, kidneys, heart, etc., the food and drink partaken of so that the blood receives an increased proportion of those elements necessary to the fulfillment of man's duties in the intensity of spirit as manifested in those of perfect health, be it work, recreation or pleasure. Nothing more valuable and certain for such a purpose is the formula much prescribed by a famed physician, but which can be prepared by anyone at home, or by a well-stocked pharmacy. Mix three ounces of compound syrup of sassafras with one ounce of compound fluid balsam and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce each of compound essence cardiol and one ounce tincture of cadomene compound (not cadomene). Shake before using and take teaspoonful before or after meals and one when retiring. Anyone can mix this and the results from its use are truly astonishing.

Picture Your Home with the Pianola-Piano

WORDS cannot express the pleasure and comfort, added to the Home by installing one of these wonderful instruments. YOU CAN PLAY IT instantly, and you want the sort of music that you may personally have the pleasure of producing.

The Pianola-Piano is unlike any of the so-called player-pianos, because it possesses improvements which are protected by United States patents, and which are vital to the artistic production of music. Only the genuine Pianola-Piano has the Metrostyles which shows you exactly how to play any piece by simply following the Red Line on your music roll, or the THEMODIST, which brings out the theme or melody clearly above the accompaniment or any of the other improvements which have brought the Pianola into favor among the greatest musical authorities.

When a genuine Pianola-Piano costs no more what folly to buy a mere imitation. A call at Aeolian Hall will verify our statements and in no way oblige you.

Member Caught in Coupling Rigging in East Yards.

BIG TURKEY

L. Knob Remembered by the Men at Pennsylvania Round House.

C. R. Rhamy, a Pennsylvania freight brakeman, had his left hand caught in the coupling rigging of a caboose at 12:30 o'clock last night and very badly crushed. He was hurried to St. Joseph's hospital, where the company's surgeons amputated a finger and a part of the hand and will make an effort to save the balance of the member. Mr. Rhamy was just in the act of leaving for the west with a "light" with Conductor H. Shelly and Engineer A. W. Boggs when the accident happened. They were going out on the line to pick up cars at the way stations. Brakeman Rhamy has been employed on the road ever since October, 1909. He came from Convooy and is 23 years old.

MUST APPLY EARLY.

The superintendent of the Wabash railroad has issued a bulletin to the employees of the company that on and after the first day of January, 1912, all employees seeking transportation over foreign lines must get in the application ten days or two weeks before they wish to use them, as, in compliance with a ruling of the interstate commerce commission it will be necessary to arrange for such transportation through the general offices.

The present custom of applying to superintendents of connecting lines must of necessity be abolished.

DOLA WATER STATION ALL RIGHT.

The Pennsylvania company's electric pumping station at Dola, O., was placed in service yesterday, after two of the large electric pumps were given heavy repairs, during the progress of which the plant was out of commission about three weeks. Millwright Henry Zollinger

The Patternmakers' union will celebrate their tenth anniversary this evening with a banquet, which will be served in Vordermark's hall. In October the Relief funds of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburgh and Erie paid out a total of $63,328.75, of which $23,650 were for the families of members who died and $39,678.75 for members who were unable to work. The sum of $8,707,119.31 represents the total payments of the Relief fund of the lines west since it was established in 1880.

TWO MEN SLIGHTLY HURT.

An engine stack which had not been securely fastened by the crane chain fell as it was being hoisted at the Pennsylvania round house this morning and struck F. Galland and K. Jahne, who were handling it. Mr. Galland had one of his arms cut and bruised and Mr. Jahne had one of his feet bruised, though neither injury is very serious.

GAVE JANITOR A TURKEY.

The employees at the Pennsylvania round house and office presented L. Knob, the janitor, with a nice, fat turkey and a purse sufficient to provide all the trimmings for a Thanksgiving dinner. Without neglecting his duties to the company Mr. Knob finds time to do a little chore now and then for the men and is always courteous and he enjoys the good will of all his shop associates.

TRAVEL IS HEAVY.

Although there were no special rates over the steam lines, the local agents report a heavy travel out of the city last night and early this morning. Incoming travel was also considerable this morning and last night. "If people want to go anywhere, they do so, whether there are cheap rates or not," said one of the agents.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Engineer and Mrs. M. F. McCarthy left last night for Wheeling, W. Va., where they will visit Mr. and Mrs. George Schmitt, formerly of this city. They will also visit relatives and friends in Columbus and Crestline before returning home. Mr. McCarthy is employed on the Nickel Plate.

FIND USE FOR MINING WASTE

Stuff Once Considered of No Value Now Is Recognized as a Marketable Product.

In all mining districts quantities of material which has been considered almost worthless have been accumulating for years. Persons of an inquiring mind have in several instances found uses for much of this so-called waste or refuse.

In Jasper county, Mo., there are hundreds of lead and zinc mines. The ores are strongly allied with lime and flint, and to remove the metals from the crude material as cheaply as possible it is necessary to crush this rock formation into small particles. After the lead and zinc have been removed there remains a very hard substance known to the workmen as "chats."

For years this was left lying on the ground in great piles, and, except for the use of a little in road construction, no use was known for it. Finally one of the railroads used it for ballast, and then it was not long until every road in that district used it, and it was pronounced the very best material for that purpose.

When concrete paving came it was tried as a filler and it was found as good as gravel and, owing to its vast quantities, was much cheaper. It found its way into concrete blocks and was used in the construction of cement foundations, culverts and bridge piers. Farmers molded it into fence posts with cement as a retainer.

During the past few months experts have been experimenting much more with this waste, and they declare that it is one of the very best materials for the construction of large concrete buildings.

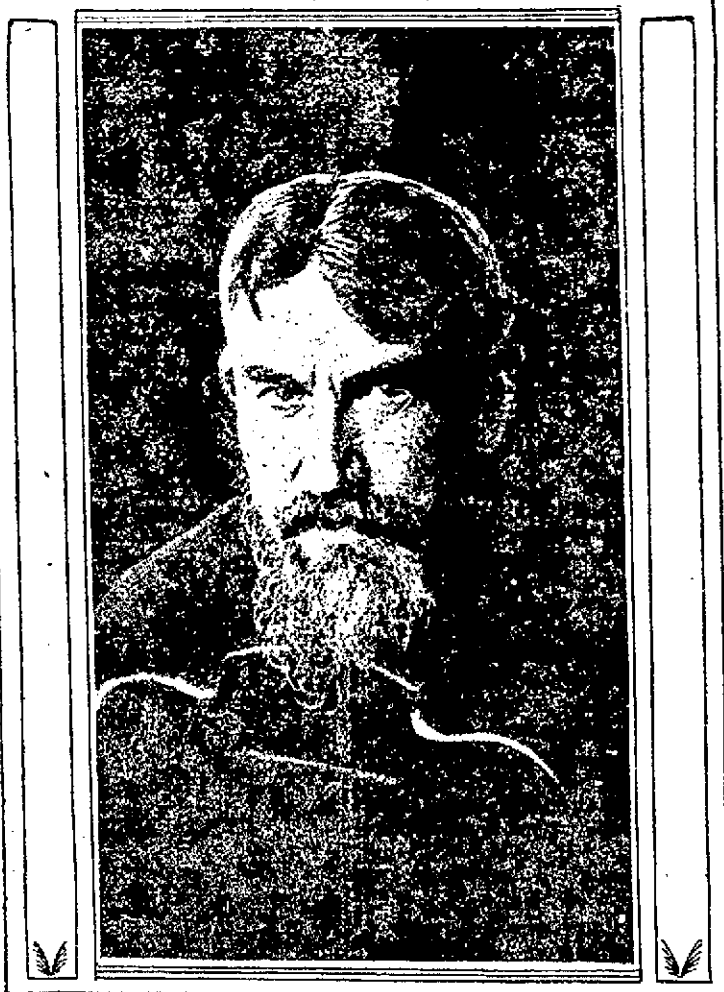

Mining waste from other mines has been found to be of more or less value. One use for slag from furnaces is in the construction of wharves and filling in of low water fronts.—Harper's Weekly.

SHAW ROASTS THE IRISH IN AMERICA

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW.

George Bernard Shaw has got himself in bad with the Irish-American people in America. In an interview he says that his own play, "The Shewing Up of Blanco Posnet," is a character study of America's young men of today, who are "hard drinking, foul mouthed persons, lost to the decencies of life." He predicts that Lady Gregory, who, he says, is the greatest Irishwoman in the world, will triumph over the New York and Boston Clan na Gael as she triumphed over the Dublin clan.

SLANG BY NO MEANS NEW

Familiar Phrase "Get the Hook" Has Come Down to Present Times From Long Ago.

"We are accustomed to having accepted ideas about the freshness and originality of our slang held up to the scorn and mockery of the initiated," said a member of a group of amateur archaeologists and antiquarians which meets regularly in one of the New York clubs.

"How often we have seized upon some newly coined phrase, some apparently unique product from the great popular language mint, and advanced it as a genuine invention of the day, only to discover that it was known to generations past in almost identical form and is truly an old coin restamped."

"Everybody is familiar with the phrase 'get the hook.' It has been established in current speech as a slang expression of peculiar vigor and terseness. Almost anyone could tell you that it originated in the amateur nights at popular vaudeville theaters where aspirants for fame are given a chance to try their powers upon an audience, and that it refers to the implement with which the stage manager brings about the actor's forcible exit when the audience can stand no more. Cat calls and jeers falling to extinguish the ardor of the performer, there is a demand for 'the hook' and the unhappy artist is dragged into the wings, willy nilly."

"From this application the phrase has come into general use for all occasions when one is bored or wearied of anything or anybody."

"Now on the face of it this looks like a truly modern bit of slang. It can be traced, apparently, to a modern custom and a modern method of entertainment. You would say, off hand, that 'the hook' is a genuine Americanism if ever there was one."

"Not at all. It is at least 19 centuries old, possibly older than that."

"Teacher was busy at her desk and did not notice him until she felt a little fist tugging at her sleeve."

"Why, Pietro!" she exclaimed, "what is the trouble?"

"Nothin', teacher. I just wanted to tell you how I was good to dumb animals yesterday," he promptly replied.

"Why, isn't that nice! Pietro, just what did you do?"

"Pietro drew himself up to his full three feet and proudly asserted: 'I kissed the cat.'"

Cochineal Scarlet.

It is the opinion of Leon Diguat, who has been studying the state of the cochineal industry in Mexico for some time, that before many years have passed cochineal scarlet will have become a thing of history only, like the Tyrian purple of antiquity. I wonder how many people are aware of the method of manufacture of this well known dye. It is made from the dried female of the cochineal insects (Coccus cacti). They are gathered by brushing the branches of the nopal cactus, on which the insects feed as soon as they begin to lay their eggs. They are then desiccated in ovens or filled with boiling water. It has been estimated that one pound of cochineal contains no fewer than 70,000 distinct insects. The color is brought out and fixed by chloride of tin. Only a few plantations of the nopal cactus now remain, hence the fear that the dye will soon become a thing of the past, at any rate unless some other substance is found on which to feed the insects.

Calendar Reform in China.

From Peking it is announced that the Chinese government is about to drop the troublesome moon from its calendar and follow the practice of western nations in using only the sun. The present Chinese year began on January 30 and is the year 48 of the seventy-sixth cycle, a cycle consisting of 60 years and the first year of the first cycle occurring B. C. 2637. But owing to the use of the moon the number of days in the year varies considerably. Ordinarily there are 12 lunations or months, but once in 30 lunations a thirteenth lunation is added to the year, as a result of which the year can be as short as 354 days or as long as 384 days. The months are more regular than our own, alternating between 29 and 30 days. The Chinese year completely fails to keep the seasons within proper bounds.

PRACTICAL WORK

Of the Anti-Tuberculosis League.

The Anti-Tuberculosis Leagues in the large cities of America are doing more practical work for the prevention of consumption than all the medicines under the sun can do toward curing it.

The Leagues are preaching the gospel of pure food, cleanliness, fresh air, exercise and personal hygiene. They are emphasizing the importance of arresting every cold and cough in its very earliest stages, thus preventing the culture of the tubercular bacillus in the mucous membranes.

One of the simplest of home remedies—pure virgin oil of pine mixed with glycerine and water—is declared to be the best and quickest acting cure for colds. Care should be taken to procure only the genuine oil of pine as prepared for this purpose by the Leach Chemical Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, which is for sale at all drug stores. Its action is immediate, and the worst colds yield to its gentle action within twenty-four hours.

PLANT AS WORKER

Their Efficiency as Helpers for Man Determined by Scientist.

CREATE WEALTH FOR RACE

Jerusalem Artichoke Is Most Valuable of All Economic Plants—The Best Rank Second, With Corn in Third Place — Potato Comes Fourth.

Some interesting statistics have been gathered by Professor Strakosch of Vienna as the result of his exhaustive study of plants from a new point of view. Taking those species which are of economic importance—that is to say, the vegetables, cereals, etc., which are of value to the human race—Strakosch has assembled them, so to speak, in his agricultural laboratory and determined with definite accuracy their efficiency as workers for man.

In other words he has considered them as if they were so many workers on the farm, ascertaining by a series of painstaking experiments just how much each one costs for its keep, and how much it produces. The object in each case has been to find out how much in value it takes from the soil in order to accomplish the result. This learned, it is easy enough to strike a balance, and to determine the amount of clear profit.

All wealth comes originally from the soil. The so-called economic plants are the workers that create wealth for the human race. By their efforts we are fed and supported. It is of obvious importance, therefore, that we should know which of them are the most efficient and capable, producing the largest output, in terms of value, for the least expenditure.

It appears from Strakosch's figures that the most efficient of all economic plants is the Jerusalem artichoke. This justly valued vegetable produces, on an acre of good land, about 7,127 pounds of starch and other digestible substances. It takes from the soil

Incidentally, $26 worth of material. But the difference between consumption and production, in terms of value, is $116.

One might imagine that the potato would be away up at the head of the list, but it is not so. The best comes next, with an output of 6,384 pounds of digestible substances to the acre, taking $41 worth of material out of the soil, and yielding a clear balance of $112. Third in order is corn, which produces 4,562 pounds of digestible substances, consuming $17 worth of material, and giving a balance on the credit side of $108 for the acre.

These, then, are the three most efficient economic plants—the best workers for man. The potato is fourth on the list. Taking $4 worth of material out of the soil for each acre planted, it yields 4,449 pounds of digestible substances (nearly all starch), and shows a balance of $72 on the credit side. Rice gives 2,254 pounds, taking $5 worth from the land, and allows a balance of $45.

Peas produce 1,864 pounds, drawing on the bank to the extent of $2, and give the farmer a clear $40 to the acre. Carrots yield 4,198 pounds, with an expenditure of $17 worth of plant food, and show a margin of $61 to the good. Rye affords an output of 1,824 pounds of nutrients at a cost of $10 to the soil and furnishes a profit of $26. A crop of crimson clover withdraws from the land hardly more than one-twentieth of the quantity of valuable material consumed by timothy.

The greatest of all starch producers is the Jerusalem artichoke, which in this respect is away ahead of the potato. For each acre of land it yields a greater quantity of nutrients than the potato by considerably more than one-third.

Value of System.

The great majority of people could double their power of achievement by a little self-discipline in learning so as to get hold of themselves as to depend on the prompt, decisive action of their own faculties. A little system alone would double the efficiency of many a business man who does not know why he does not get on faster. He works very hard, perhaps, and thinks that he has not half time enough to do what he ought to, but he could save more than half the time that he now throws away in doing things over and over again from lack of order. System is a tremendous energy saver and time saver.—Success Magazine.

The Girl Who Wishes to Succeed.

The girl who would succeed must keep her eyes, ears and heart open for whatever means a larger, more cultivated and comprehensive view of the world and humanity. She must endeavor to retain her own individuality, keep her own convictions of right and wrong and improve her own personality, without allowing herself to become a copy of any one else. And yet she must realize that every day she is meeting men and women who have enjoyed greater privileges, perhaps, than she has known, and put herself into a receptive state of mind to learn from them whatever can be of benefit to her in any possible way.

Men and Women Workers.

E INDICATES A PART OF OUTSIDE BOTTOM OF SHIP. IT CAME FROM UNDER THE TEN INCH MAGAZINE.

Through the mud in and about the wreck of the Maine, in Havana Harbor, members of the Joint Army and Navy Board of Inspection are wading on their tour of inspection. They spent a considerable time examining the keel forward of frame No. 41, which received the closest attention.

The experts are pushing the work rapidly and it is expected that a definite report on their findings will be made in a short time. The accompanying illustration shows a part of the old battle ship and a key to the conditions. An Unequaled Assortment of Player - Pianos

Now on exhibition in our Player Department, including the Pre-eminent Player Piano of each individual and successful type. An educational opportunity for comparison not to be found elsewhere.

The Packard Interpreting Piano

The Artistic Player Piano that completely eliminates all mechanical musical effects; as the name indicates, the performer is not hampered by mechanical devices, but is free to interpret a composition as his mood dictates, affording the pleasure and feeling of personally producing music that is lacking in many other players. Built in three sizes and a variety of designs, affording a choice that will harmonize with the most artistic surroundings. Case in handsome figured Burl Walnut, Mahogany and True Mission designs. It is the Player for the critical embodied in a Piano whose tone is unsurpassed by any other piano in existence.

The Tel-Electric Player

The most significant achievement in the history of music; the latest development; the most wonderful piano player in the world is the Tel-Electric. It marks a new epoch in piano player production.

It is the product of years of study by men of pronounced electrical and mechanical genius, and its use for five years in the most representative homes has proved it a success. The Packard Grand, containing the Tel-Electric, is as different from all other Player Grands as you could possibly imagine. It plays artistically without your assistance or under your absolute control—no player so readily lends itself to the individuality of the operator. Yet the prices are one-third less than any other Player Grand. Daily demonstration at Packard Recital Hall all this week.

The Knabe-Angelus

The world famous Knabe Piano containing the Angelus, the pioneer of all Players. The artistic supremacy of the Angelus is due to the most wonderful and valuable of all player devices.

The Phrasing Lever, by which your control of tempo is as direct and constant as in playing an entirely new quality of expression, the ability to emphasize the melody and subdue the accompaniment in any desired and varying degree—The Melody Buttons, which control, to the most delicate shade, every degree of loudness and softness of tone—The Sustaining Pedal Device—The Diaphragm Pneumatics—The Artistic Music Rolls—are all exclusive devices to be had in no other Player Piano. Compare by personal examination.

The Auto Piano

The Popular Player Piano; the choice of the United States navy; endorsed by VICTOR HERBERT, PUCCINI, POPE PIUS X, TETRAZZINI, etc.; the choice in many homes in Fort Wayne and vicinity; the choice because of its satisfactory musical results, demonstrated durability and ease of operation; popular in price and sold on most liberal terms.

Splendid for croup, hoarseness, throat tickle, incipient lung troubles, and a prompt, successful remedy for whooping cough. Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in guaiac and other elements which are so beneficial to the membranes. HERDER WELL PAID

Handling Fancy Cattle One of Best Jobs in Out of City Work.

FOREIGNERS TAKE THE LEAD

Most Accomplished Herdsmen in Charge of American Cattle Haul
From Ireland, Scotland, England and the Netherlands
—Care of Animals an Art.

The work of a herdsman in charge of the costly dairy herds in such aggregations of stock as that of the National Dairy show in Chicago has been put on such high plane that it has become one of the best paid jobs in out of the city work.

Only the men who own such herds know how important it is to have an accomplished herdsman in charge of his stock. This care not only covers the farm, but the road to and from the shows, and in the arena where judging is under way.

A large per cent of the herdsmen in charge of American herds are foreigners. They hail largely from Ireland, Scotland, England, and the Netherlands. Some of these men in their native country were early taught to make the best possible use of every ounce of feed assigned to the upkeep of the animals. Most of them had no such liberal appropriation of feed stuff as that provided by the American dairy and beef stock farmers, so that most of them engaged in the work in this country with some exceedingly economical ideas in taking care of a herd of high bred cattle.

Dairymen claim that the dairy animals are much higher strung and nervous than the beef tribe, and much more care seems to be demanded in guarding them from undue excitement.

Then the herdsman must keep track not only of the herd, but of the individual cow, especially when the latter is engaged in making a record. On such occasion the herdsman is as particular about the feed of a cow as a doctor is in directing the diet of a patient. Of course the owner of the herd directs his man what to feed, but there is a deal in faithfully carrying out the orders.

When an animal or a part of the herd is in the ring the herdsman constantly is on the watch to see that an animal stands in the most graceful position. Almost constantly he is touching a hoof with his own toe in an effort to secure a better showing of an animal on all fours.

When a herd is on exhibition the head herdsman leaves the animals scarcely long enough to get his meals. He sleeps on a cot close by, and if an animal shows some sign of indisposition, the attention of the herdsman is as close as that of the trained nurse to a human patient. The most scrupulous care is taken in the matter of blanketing and in guarding against the herd sleeping in drafts.

The wages of a herdsman ranges all the way from $45 to $75 a month and even more, according to the size and character of the herd. The board and lodging of a herdsman is furnished in addition to his wages.

In late years a great deal of progress is made in rendering show animals tractable. They are handled with consummate skill in many places and under conditions capable of producing a stampede. There have been instances in which a good herdsman has accomplished the entire subjugation of an animal predisposed toward viciousness.

Telephones Keep Records.

A reproach which has often been raised against the telephone is that it leaves no trace whatever of the conversation transmitted. Thus, a telephone conversation can never figure in a law suit. It is not surprising, therefore, that for some time past efforts have been made to devise an apparatus by means of which a permanent record can be kept of the words spoken over the telephone, and the phonograph has often been thought of in this connection. According to a note reproduced in La Nature from L'Electricista, Prof. P. Perotti has just scored a success in this direction. The telephone receiver is composed of two loud-speaking telephones; one of these is furnished with the usual mouthpiece; the other is connected with the vibrating membrane of a Pathe phonograph. The current required for this telephone is a little greater than for ordinary installations. The phonograph record can be made to reproduce the speech in the usual manner.

Steam Turbine Improvements.

The superiority of the reciprocating engine over the steam turbine, when a ship is steaming at low speed, is destined to disappear. At high speed the turbine possesses every advantage, but at low speed it is extravagant in its use of steam. Of the several systems of reduction gear by which the widely different economical speeds of propeller and turbine are sought to be harmonized, the electric drive seems to present the most promise. A better method would be the proper combination of reciprocating engines for low speed and turbines for high speed. The navy has under consideration a system of this kind which we hope shortly to present for the consideration of our readers.—Scientific American.

Laboratory-Tested Milk Utterly Free From Germs

For Less Than Thin, Germ-Laden Milk

Mrs. Housewife—

Close to each of our dairies, in seven northern states, we maintain a complete milk laboratory. There we test the milk's richness and purity. There we prove that it's free from germs.

Our standards are fixed by famous Dutch and Swiss experts. And there is no finer milk produced in the world than the milk they select for you.

Richness Doubled

The milk fresh from the cows is put into a copper vacuum. There, in moderate heat, we evaporate two-thirds of the water. Thus the richness of the milk is much more than doubled.

It is then as thick as thick cream—28 per cent solids, 8 per cent butter fat. Yet, save for the water, it remains natural milk. Nothing whatever is added. When you put back the water you have milk just as it came from the cow, except for sterilization.

Like Using Cream

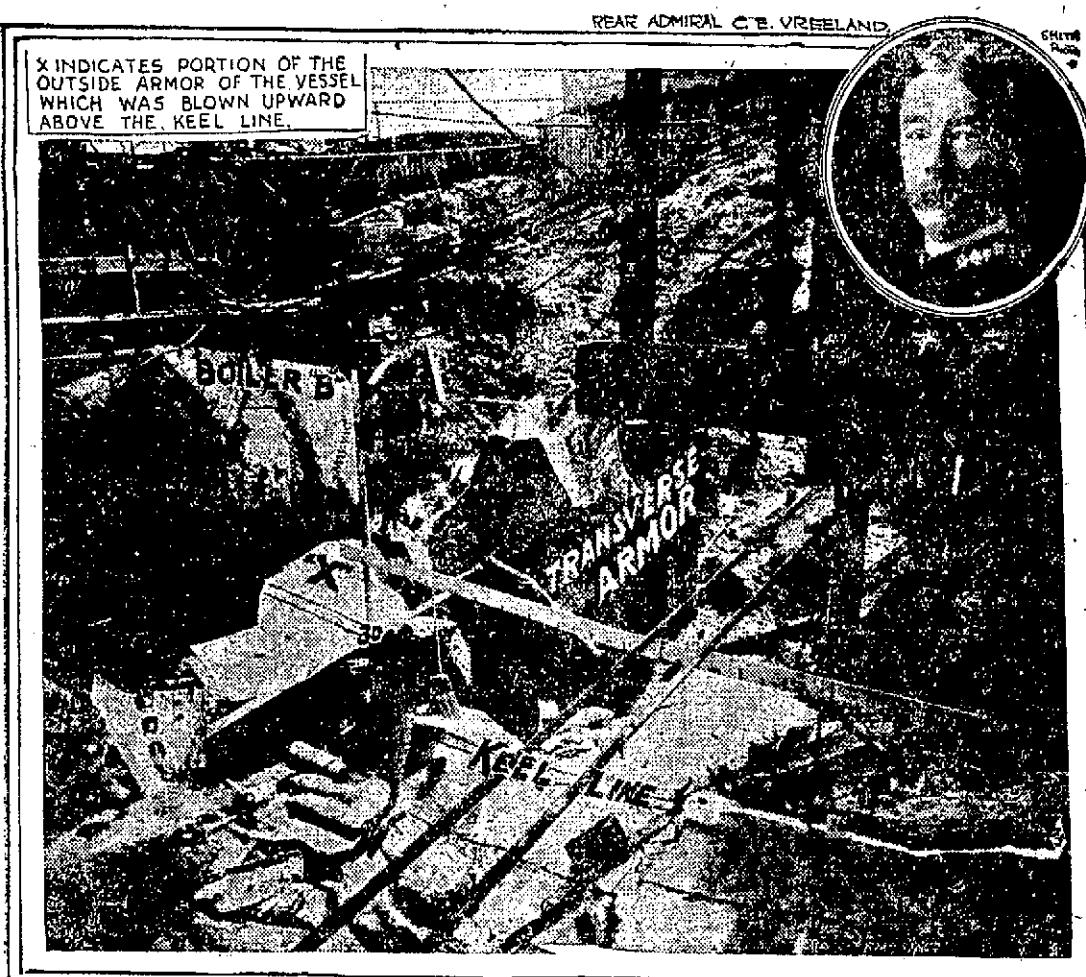

In coffee and on cereals this milk is just like cream, so rich that most people reduce it. In cooking it gives to milk dishes a most surprising flavor.

DECIDES BATTLE SHIP MAINE WAS BLOWN UP FROM THE OUTSIDE.

PHOTOGRAPH OF MAINE WRECK, SHOWING FRAME 30 UNDER WHICH BOARD SAYS FIRST EXPLOSION CAME.

The battle ship Maine was blown up from the outside. This will be the finding of the Joint Army and Navy Board of Inspection, which is now in session here and whose verdict is expected to end for all time the bitter controversy which has been carried on for thirteen years over the disaster in Havana Harbor.

The report of the joint board will not be made public until it passes through the hands of the Secretary of the Navy, George von L. Meyer, to whom it will be submitted when the members of the Vreeland Board reach Washington.

MODEL OF THE MAINE TO BE USED BY JOINT BOARD IN ILLUSTRATING REPORT.

Yet this is nothing but milk—just the whole, rich milk. You don't often get that from the milkman because the milk separates. Before it gets to the cooking it is often only a half-milk.

Used on the table you have the advantage of using a germless milk. Raw milk, as you know, is always germ-laden. Nothing else that is eaten or drunk carries so much infection. Van Camp's Milk is pasteurized after the can is sealed. It is absolutely free from germs.

You can buy, if you wish, a month's supply at a time. It is always on hand—milk or cream—and never any waste. An opened can keeps until you use it up.

Think of buying milk from day to day—milk always filled with germs—when a milk like this can be always on hand, always fresh, always the best milk produced in America.

It's Cheaper, Too

Our method saves the cost of daily delivery. That's about four cents per quart. And it saves all waste. In the average family the use of Van Camp's cuts milk bills square in two.

This milk—from the finest high-bred cows—tested and pasteurized—costs less than milk-wagon milk. Do you wonder that people now use all we can get from 30,000 cows?

The 16-oz. can—a full pint of Van Camp's—costs 10 cents. The 6-oz. can costs 5 cents. That's with two-thirds the water evaporated. Your grocer gets it direct from our nearest dairy.

IT STARTLED THE WORLD

I do not dabble in dry goods, cloth-

not profess to conduct a department

ence of 27 consecutive years of honest dealing in our city, in children's toys, has given me an advantage in knowledge in buying and selling that in turn is most advantageous to my customers.

I have the largest and best stock of

MARKS REVOLUTION IN ZINC SMELTING

Montana Man Has Process by Which He Uses Electricity.

SAVING IS EFFECTED

Joplin, Mo., Nov. 30.—One of the questions that has been puzzling smelter men for many years has been that of discovering an economical method of smelting zinc ores. It has been solved, however, according to P. E. Peterson, a mining engineer, a recent graduate of the Montana State School of Mines. Mr. Peterson is a metallurgist and a student, who, during the period he spent in the school of mines, devoted much of his time to experimenting along the lines of ore dressing and smelting.

Mr. Peterson is said to have accomplished what older men have spent years in trying to do, and his method, which utilizes electricity to a great extent, is now commanding the attention of smeltermen of long experience. Mr. Peterson is modest concerning his achievement, however, and rather reluctantly he has consented to publicity in an interview. Mr. Peterson's method is adapted to the smelting of concentrated and crude ores, the latter yielding readily to the process when the ores carry about 35 per cent. zinc, or a sufficient mineral content to average that percentage. In treating ores that are essentially zinc, all of the gold, silver and lead values are saved. By this process as high as 98 per cent. of the mineral content of the ore has been saved in an experimental plant which Mr. Peterson has built in Anaconda and he states that 85 per cent. is certain, against 85 per cent. which has been the maximum by the retort process in use in the zinc smelters in Missouri and Kansas. And in this process there has been no improvement since the time the first smelters were built in that district.

Problem An Old One.
The problem that has baffled all others who have experimented with an electric furnace has been that of condensing the zinc fumes to metallic spelter. This, Mr. Peterson says, he has solved. The gold, copper and silver are recovered in the form of a matter and the lead is recovered in the form of metallic lead, which also carries the gold and silver. Mr. Peterson's process results in a simple separation of five of the most difficult elements to treat in one operation.

In the matter of cost Mr. Peterson has so minimized the matter that other methods such as those in use in Missouri and in the treatment of oxide ores, offer little competition. The quality of the spelter produced by Mr. Peterson's process is equal in purity to that produced by any other method.

In Mr. Peterson's process the ores in all probability will be roasted, but the roasting will not have to be carried to the extent that it is in the Missouri zinc smelters. They will be roasted to a point where they will contain from 12 to 15 per cent. sulphur, which will be sufficient, depending, of course, on the composition of the ore.

The process is particularly adaptable to all zinc ores which carry a high percentage of zinc. While much experimenting has been done with electricity in the smelting of zinc ores, up to the present time it has been considered out of the question on account of the excessive cost. The cost feature has been of minor importance, however, with Mr. Peterson, as it has been reduced to a minimum. The matter of condensing the zinc has engaged his attention for the last six months and always has been considerable of a drawback with other experimenters with the electrical processes.

Mr. Peterson has not only reduced the cost of electricity to a minimum, but he has solved the problem of smelter construction so that it is low in comparison with the retort system.

In the roasting process, as adopted by Mr. Peterson, the ore is reduced to the oxide form and then the oxide is reduced in the furnace with carbon. Electricity is used instead of gas or coal for furnishing heat. The process is continuous instead of intermittent.

Mr. Peterson estimates that by his process a ton of zinc ore would yield 3.2 cents down in New York at a cost of 3.2 cents, giving a profit of 2.42 cents a pound at the present market value of the metal.

Commenting on the possibilities of electricity in the reduction of zinc ores, Joseph W. Richards, one of the foremost metallurgists in the country, recently stated before the American Electrochemical society:

"It is quite within the bounds of probability to expect to see in the future 500 kilowatt electric zinc furnaces, producing 2,000 tons of metal per year, the equivalent in production capacity of 800 retorts. In such furnaces the extraction of zinc will be more perfect than in retorts; the metal should be more uniform in quality; the labor charges less; capacity for treating a variety of ores greater and control of temperature better. The cost of electrical power would approximate the cost of coal used in present practice."

"Entirely irrespective of the merits of this particular furnace, it is probable that the near future will see the beginning of the abolition of the fire clay zinc retort in America. We may even say that the new era of electric zinc smelting has dawned. The electric zinc furnace will be another permanent feature of this rapidly progressive age of electrometallurgy."

OLDEST "NEW WOMAN"

GRANDMA ELECTA KENNEDY

California's universal suffrage law gives that State the distinction of having the oldest "new woman." She is Mrs. Electa Kennedy, 101 years old, and when it came time recently to register Mrs. Kennedy—who is known as "Grandma" Kennedy through the section of the city in which she lives—scorned the suggestion that the poll book be brought to her home, and she walked all the way to the polling booth.

A REGAL HEAD

How often do we hear or see this expression used in describing a beautiful woman?

Denude that head of its hair and instead of a queenly, royal bearing we have a fright. The hair makes all the difference. To have that glorious abundance of radiant hair which always crowns "a regal head," one should use Newbro's Herpicide.

Herpicide represents the last word in scientific hair culture. It destroys the dandruff germ, checks falling hair and cures generally diseases of the hair and scalp.

The positive results and its delicate but refreshing odor recommends Newbro's Herpicide to ladies of refinement everywhere.

YOU WILL WITNESS THIS WHEN THE POST OFFICES ARE IN THE AIR

VISION OF THE FUTURE—PICKING UP MAIL BY AEROPLANE FROM THE LONDON EXPRESS.

Granting that aeroplanes will in the not remote future be much larger and heavier and able to steer with greater precision than at present, this prediction is reasonable. The picture shows the collection of mail bags from a post office equipped as a wireless station. A tall tower is erected with a swiveling contrivance at the top consisting of a horizontally mounted revolving shaft controlled by buffers. At the end of this a mail bag is suspended by a ring, which is capable of sliding along the shaft. The aeroplane is fitted with a projection under the lower right hand plane, which, as the machine approaches the tower, comes in contact with the swiveling shaft, and as it travels horizontally forward slides along in contact with the shaft as it revolves. The projection simultaneously sweeps off the mail bag into a net placed suitably to receive it above the landing chassis of the aeroplane. At night the tower would be illuminated and all heavy post office aeroplanes provided with searchlights.
